Newspapers Are Upheld In Right Of Comment

High Court Frees 3 Men of Contempt In Texas Case By 6-to-3 Decision

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court yesterday upheld the newspapers in their right to print the news as they find it and comment as they choose, without being in contempt of court.

Three newspapermen who were sentenced to jail by a Texas judge were freed by the 6-to-3 decision.

The high court said judges cannot punish the press even for false reports and unjust comment, unless the publications bring a clear and present danger to the administration of justice.

Jackson Sees "Pressure"

Many newsmen saw a new charter of liberty in the majority opinion, in which Justice Douglas spoke for himself and Justices Black, Reed, Rutledge and Burton. Justice Murphy concurred in an opinion of his own.

Justice Jackson dissented, and bluntly insinuated that the majority were giving in to newspaper pressure.

Justice Frankfurter spoke for himself and Chief Justice Vinson in a second dissenting opinion.

Grew Out of Petty Suit

Yesterday's decision grew out of a petty suit over the lease of the Playboy Cafe in Corpus Christi, Tex. Joe L. Mayes, who was an Army private but was running the cafe through an agent, was sued by his landlord in May, 1945. After hearing evidence, County Judge Joe D. Browning told a jury in the Neuces County Court to find that Mayes had lost his lease by not paying his rent and that the landlord was entitled to take back the cafe. Twice the jurors refused, and found for Mayes. After being locked up all one Saturday night, the jurors obeyed Judge Browning, but said the verdict was given under coercion and against their consciences.

Tom Mulvany, a reporter for the Corpus Christi Caller Times, covered the case. Douglas said the reports were sketchy, unfair and one-sides. For instance, the reports said Mayes offered a check in payment of his rent, but they did not say the check was post-dated. They left out the terms of Mayes' contract with his landlord, the legal grounds of Judge Browning's order to the jury and the names of the landlords, who were respected business and professional men.

Editorial Followed Stories

Bob McCracken, an editorial writer, followed up the news stories with an attack on Judge Browning for deciding the case without hearing argument. The editorial deplored the fact that Browning was not a lawyer, and that there was no appeal from his rulings. McCracken used such words as "high-handed" and "travesty on justice."

All this was printed while the judge had before him a motion for a new trial.

Douglas said the language of the editorial was intemperate and its criticism unfair.

Other news stories told of public clamor against Judge Browning's ruling, and of a petition that was to be handed him urging a new trial.

Publisher Jailed

For these publications, Mulvany, McCracken and Conway C. Craig, publisher of the Caller-Times, were cited for contempt of court. They were found guilty and sentenced to three days in jail, and the sentence was upheld by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Douglas said for the majority that the false and unfair nature of the news stories and editorials were not enough to expose the newsmen to punishment for contempt of court.

Parallel Drawn

Douglas said:

"A trial is a public event. What transpires in the courtroom is public property. If a transcript of the court proceedings has been published, we suppose none would claim that the judge could punish the publisher for contempt. And

Defense Calls No Witnesses In Lynch Trial

Defendants Jubilant As Judge Limits Use of Statements

Greenville, S. C., May 19 (AP).—The defense of 28 white men, accused of lynching a South Carolina Negro, was rested abruptly today in Greenville county criminal court without testimony of a single witness nor submission of any evidence.

The court immediately recessed until 9:30 a. m. tomorrow, when final arguments begin.

Defense Attorney Benjamin A. Bolt closed the case dramatically after Circuit Judge J. Robert Martin, jr., had directed acquittal for three of an original 31 defendants, and granted qualified acquittal on two out of four counts for another seven. Moreover, the court announced, incriminating statements allegedly made by 26 defendants at the time of their arrest will be admitted in evidence only against the persons making them.

Co-Defendants Jubilant

Jubilant co-defendants pump-handled the acquitted men and slapped them on the back, while other friends pressed forward to congratulate them. Several defendants rushed to windows to shout their good news to friends on the street below. Negro spectators in the court house gallery heard the decision in silence.

The State alleges that 24-year-old Negro Willie Earle was forcibly taken from jail in adjoining Pickens County in the frosty predawn of last February 17, brought into Greenville County in a car, beaten and fatally shot in reprisal for his alleged stabbing of a Greenville cab driver who later died.

Judge Martin told the jury they must disregard allegations made by any individual against any co-defendant.

"In view of your ruling, Your Honor, the defense rests," said Bolt.

Court to Charge Jury

His first words were obscured by mild confusion in the courtroom, where scuffling and an undercurrent of conversation followed Judge Martin's comments to the jury. But there was no uncertainty in Bolt's conclusion: ". . . the defense rests."

The length of the court's charge to the jury was uncertain. But it appeared likely that the jury would receive the case sometime Wednesday.

Here's how the case stands:

Acquitted on all counts—three defendants.

Acquitted of murder and of being accessories after the fact, but still charged with conspiracy

Oust Teachers Who Are Reds, DAR Is Told

Delegates to the Daughters of the American Revolution's 56th annual Congress yesterday were twice alerted to the dangers of Communism in the United States and throughout the world.

The approximately 4500 delegates gathered here from every State, plus Alaska, France, China and England, head the warnings at a pre-convention national defense rally in the afternoon, and again at the formal congress opening last night in the society's headquarters, Constitution Hall.

Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge of Athens, Ga., president general of the DAR, last night urged every member "to constitute herself a committee of one" to oppose infiltration of communist teachers in American schools.

In her keynote address she declared, "The spread of communism in this country must be stopped. It can be stopped if we emphasize that the only 'ism' in this land is Americanism."

Would Outlaw Communism

"Our organization should stand behind every movement by our Federal and State Legislatures to outlaw communism," she said. "We should tolerate no one in public office who is secretly working to overthrow our Government and subsitute the totalitarian system of a foreign power.

"Every Daughter of the American Revolution should constitute herself a committee of one to oppose by every means within her power the infiltration of Communist teachers in our school and colleges and to combat the spreading of Communist poison in the minds of our young students."

She said that one of the best ways to combat subversive activities is to build a better citizenship, especially among the young.

"Youth faces today a world of confusion", said Mrs. Talmadge, "a world falling apart. We must provide opportunities for our young men and young women to make a decent living, to have good homes and to live in peace and security."

Sees Youth Being Misled

Speaking for American youth at the defense rally conclave, Dan L. O'Keefe, of New Jersey, editor of "Junior Achievement," charged that the "Youth of this country is being misled and confused by double-talk propaganda."

"American Youth for Democracy is an out and out Communist outfit," he declared. He said the Communists take the slum children of New York to summer camps and "indoctrinate them with their poison." They form football teams between "capital" and "labor," depicting the capitalist side as incompetent weaklings, and labor as the strong man, he declared.

May Takes Stand to Deny Bribe Charge

Never Conspired 'To Defraud My Country,' He Swears

By The Associated Press

A denial that he ever "entered into a conspiracy with anybody to defraud my country" came yesterday from Andrew J. May, former Kentucky Congressman, at his war bribe trial.

"I never thought of such a thing," May exclaimed.

The 72-year-old former House Military Committee chairman gripped the arms of the witness chair so hard that his hands paled.

May is charged with taking $55,000 in wartime bribes from munitions makers Henry and Murray Garsson, leaders of a 78 million dollar arms combine. The Garssons brothers are on trial, too, charged with bribe conspiracy.

The Government charged that part of the alleged bribes included a $5000 payment from Murray Garsson to retire notes May owed a New York bank.

May's Story of Notes

May explained that he incurred the debt acting as "an accommodation signer" of the notes for Murray Garsson. He said Murray wanted to buy a Greenbriar County, W. Va., manganese mining lease May owned.

"The only purpose I had in executing those notes," May said, "was to assist Mr. Garsson and Mr. Freeman to purchase the Greenbriar lease to get some money to salvage the loss the stockholders and I had taken."

Joseph Freeman, Washington agent for the Garssons, was originally a codefendant in the trial but was freed in a bench-directed acquittal after the Government completed its case last week.

Warren Magee, May's attorney, asked the former Congressman whether he had considered that he was helping the Garsson firms when he borrowed money for Murray Garsson and Freeman to buy the mining lease.

"Positively not," May replied. "It was a private business transaction."

Another $5000 Note

May said he signed another $5000 note for Murray Garsson with Elisha Walker, New York banker. Asked whether this note

Limit On Talks Urged

Absenteeism During Speeches Cause of Concern in Senate

By the United Press

The Senate debated briefly yesterday the ethics—or wisdom—of Senators who skip out of their colleagues' long-winded speeches.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) was aghast because only 22 Senators were on hand for the start of the day's debate.

"This is an absolutely wrong way to run the business of the Senate," he observed.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) replied that he, for one, "isn't going to sit here and listen" to four and five hour speeches "unless the sergeant at arms makes me." Adding that he would rather tend to pressing committee work than be an audience for "great oratory," he continued:

"You get very little information out of a speech that takes four and five hours to deliver. The average man could say it all in 30 minutes."

O'Mahoney said the Congressional Reorganization Act forbids committee metings while the Senate is in session. He moved to find out just how many committees were meeting.

Republican Leader Wallace H. White (R., Me.) objected.

But, he admitted, "certainly the situation is grave."

O'Mahoney said that as soon as the speeches stop—and the Senate is ready to vote on the pending science bill—absent Senators "will come rushing onto the floor without the slightest knowledge of the issues."

White said he didn't know what to do about growing absenteeism. He thought Republican and Democratic policy committees should consider the problem.

O'Mahoney suggested forbidding "irrelevant debate."

"Then we wouldn't have these two, three and five-hour speeches," he said.

Tydings said a "partial cure" might be to limit every Senator to one hour of talk on pending bills, and an hour apiece for every amendment.

At this point, Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) obtained permission for an Appropriations Subcommittee to meet while the Senate was in session.

An hour later, only nine Senators were on the floor.

Among those absent: Tydings, O'Mahoney and White.

Mrs. Truman Is Stronger, Doctor Says

BULLETIN

Grandview, Mo., May 19.—Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham said late today that "Mother Truman is a little stronger at the moment, but there has been a general weakening in her condition."

"She is sleeping more and more." Graham said, adding that the spirited 94-year-old mother of the President asked for a pork chop for luncheon, and he gave it to her.

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Grandview, Mo., May 19.—Mrs. Martha Ellen Truman, 94-year-old mother of the President, showed no improvement today.

The growing concern in the family was evidenced by the decision of Miss Margaret Truman to postpone two concert appearances and fly here from Pittsburgh. She was to have sung in the Steel City tomorrow night and in Cleveland on Thursday night.

Mrs. Bess Truman, the First Lady, was getting ready to come on here from Washington having canceled or postponed all White House social activities for the next 10 days.

Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham, the White House physician, issued this terse medical report on the President's mother in the morning: "There is no change, but Mrs. Truman is very tired." Her weakened heart, he said, continued to be the chief cause for anxiety.

Town Is Tranquil

Outwardly, this little Missouri town of 800 is tranquil. Except for the flags that wave along Main st.—the merchants always put them out when the President is here—and except for the presence of extra Secret Service men, there is nothing to call attention to the drama that is taking place in the five-room Truman bungalow.

White spirea was blooming all over Grandview today. A hired man who comes every Monday to mow the Truman lawn showed up as usual this morning. Down the street a woman in gingham dress and a sunbonnet worked in her garden with a hoe. Hound dogs dozed on the stoops. Occasionally a train passed over the Kansas City & Southern tracks, its locomotive bell tolling.

Among the callers at the yellow and green bungalow this morning was the Rev. Wilbern Bowman, pastor of the Grandview Baptist Church, of which Mrs. Truman is a member.

Army Chaplain Visits

It was learned that a late visitor yesterday was Col. Curtis Tiernan, Catholic Army chaplain at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. He is an old friend of the family, having served with President Truman in France in World War I. He was

Nats Lead Chisox, 1-0, in Second

The Washington Nats grabbed a 1-0 lead in the second inning of their night game with the Chicago White Sox without making a hit.

The Nats scored on a walk, two infield outs and a wild pitch. Early Wynn was on the mound for the Nats.

FIRST INNING

WASHINGTON—Grace walked. Lewis was out to Jones, unassisted, Grace taking second. Vernon also went out to Jones, unassisted, Grace moving to third. Grace scored on a wild pitch. Kolloway threw out McBride. One run, no hits, no errors, none left.

SECOND INNING

CHICAGO—Kennedy lined to Priddy. On a nice play by Priddy, Priddy threw out Kolloway. Philley singled to right center. Dicker struck out. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

WASHINGTON—Robertson flied to Tucker. Priddy lined to Tucker. Christman flied to Tucker. Nothing across.

Will Lay Aid Groundwork

Army, Navy Officers Leave To Bolster Turkey's Defense

By The Associated Press

A 20-man vanguard of the official U. S. missions assigned to administer the 400-million-dollar Greek-Turkish aid program left by Army Air Transport Command plane yesterday for Istanbul.

Maj. Gen. Lunsford E. Oliver of the War Department general staff was in charge of the group. It will lay the groundwork for a projected 100-million-dollar outlay in the next year to bolster Turkey's military defense.

Eleven other Army officers, seven Navy officers and a State Department representative made up the remainder of the party. Rear Admiral Ernest E. Herman headed the Navy group.

At Istanbul the military mission is expected to work directly under Ambassador Edwin C. Wilson and submit to Washington recommendations for the arms, military equipment, air field and road construction and other projects figuring in the assistance program.

The group's departure was arranged without waiting for President Truman to act on the assistance legislation. The signing has been delayed by Mr. Truman's absence from the White House because of the illness of his mother at Grandview, Mo. This in turn has delayed completion of the larger Greek mission, including military elements, which will administer the aid program in Greece.

Aid Plans to Be Lumped

Representative Taber (R., N. Y.), chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, disclosed plans yesterday to lump all of the administration's pending foreign aid and relief programs into a single deficiency bill. These programs now total more than 800 million dollars.

In addition to 400 million dollars authorized for Greece and Turkey, Congress still has under consideration a recommendation for 350 millions for post-UNRRA relief, and a scheduled 75 million dollar American contribution to the International Relief Organization.

If the State Department's request for 31 million dollars for foreign cultural relations activities is not provided in the current appropriation bill, but authorized in later legislation, money for this purpose might also be included in the deficiency bill which Taber plans to lay before the House about the middle of June.

Must Await Estimates

Marzani Loyal Beyond Doubt, Says Witness

Former Brigadier Testifies; Jury May Get Case Tomorrow

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Brig. Gen. Edward S. Greenbaum, wartime assistant to the Undersecretary of War, yesterday led a parade of witnesses testifying in District Court in behalf of Carl Aldo Marzani.

Marzani is on trial on charges of concealing affiliations with the Communist Party while serving in the Office of Strategic Services. His attorney, Charles E. Ford, said Marzani would take the witness stand today.

Greenbaum, who left active Army duty a year and a half ago, testified that he had known the defendant since 1943, having met him in Washington. He said that as far as he was concerned Marzani's "loyalty had never been questioned."

He and the defendant, said Greenbaum, had friends in common, and among these persons Marzani's reputation for truth and loyalty "had never been questioned."

Professor Testifies

Another witness, Emile Despres, now a professor at Williams College, under whom Marzani worked in the OSS, testified that the defendant's reputation for loyalty, truth and veracity was "excellently high."

Despres declared he would have found it "hard to believe" if anyone had told him Marzani was a Communist. He admitted his answer as to reputation would have been different had it been proved to him that Marzani was a Communist.

He said he had heard allegations of Marzani's alleged Communist affiliations, but satisfied himself that the allegations were false before hiring Marzani.

Henry Brodie, State Department employe and former economics instructor at New York University, said he knew Marzani in 1940-1941 as a student at NYU evening classes.

Others who testified in Marzani's favor included: Meyer Goldberg, former Republican assemblyman in New York; John D. Lamula, former New York assemblyman, who had been active with Marzani in the East Side Defense Council; Mrs. Cecilia Bowes, 3631 10th st. nw., a State Department clerk; Robert D. Francis, former tentmate of Marzani's when both were overseas with OSS; James T. Wright, 2225 Ontario rd. nw., State Department employe.

Pickets Keep Some Phone Operators Idle

Most Back at Work However; Equipment Workers Form Lines

Hundreds of Washington telephone operators yesterday refused to return to work across Western Electric striker's picket lines despite settlement of their own dispute.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. announced, however, that 74.5 per cent of the Telephone Traffic Union's 3400 members had come back to work by 7 p. m.

A spokesman said "a lot of people stayed away" because of WE lines thrown around the downtown headquarters buildings, the exchange at 14th st. and Columbia rd. nw., and the Dupont Center at 14th and R sts. nw.

Officially, the local operators' walkout ended at 6 a. m. with an agreement for $2 to $4 weekly wage increases.

Meantime, the Association of Communications Equipment Workers, whose striking members reassembled picket lines around major exchanges across the country early yesterday, were locked in conferences at the Labor Department with WE officials.

Union officials went back into contract talks at 2:30 p. m., ostensibly armed with a counter-proposal to a company offer made prior to a 5 a. m. adjournment yesterday. There was no official word on progress of talks, though sources close to the negotiations looked for a break at any time.

In Richmond, the State of Virginia approached its final hurdle in the series of telephone crises and prepared to take over operation of seven telephone exchanges on the Eastern Shore at 6 a. m., according to the Associated Press.

The Eastern Shore exchanges, part of the C. & P. Co. of Virginia, are at Cape Charles, Omancock, Parksley, Belle Haven, Chincoteague, Eastville and Temperanceville.

Virtually all of the 77 operators in the seven exchanges have signified willingness to work for the State if necessary and the process of taking them over will be merely a formality for the State Corporation Commission.

In Baltimore, however, traffic union officials reported it was still undecided whether Maryland's operators would go on strike. Suburban Maryland workers would not be involved.

Mrs. Margaret Weiss, president of the Maryland Telephone Traffic Union, said results of Saturday night's strike vote would not be announced until sometime today.

The switch board operators quit their jobs for about two hours Saturday to attend meetings for a poll on a posible strike. They are seeking a $4 raise. About 4200 workers are involved.

U. S. Health Insurance Is Asked By Truman

Five-Point Program To Include Medical And Dental Care Sent to Congress

President Truman yesterday appealed to Congress to start a broad medical aid program including Nation-wide health insurance, but both Senate and House are expected to turn a deaf ear to the request.

The Chief Executive signed the final draft of his message at Grandview, Mo., where he is keeping vigil at the bedside of his gravely ill mother.

Warning that the Nation cannot "reserve a chance for good health and a long productive life to the well-to-do alone," President Truman asked Congress to initiate a five-point program.

Lists Five Points

He said the program must include:

1. Adequate public health services, including an expanded maternal and child health program.
2. Additional medical research and medical education.
3. More hospitals and more doctors in all areas of the country where they are needed.
4. Insurance against the costs of medical care (including dental care).
5. Protection against loss of earnings during illness.

Bill Due Today

A group of Democratic Senators will introduce tiday a bill to provide a compulsory Federal health insurance program financed by a payroll tax, similar to social security taxes.

The measure will be similar to the so-called Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill which died without action last session. Its sponsors are not hopeful that the GOP-controlled Congress will act on the measure.

President Truman left it to Congress to work out how all men, women and children in the county can be assured of "needed medical attention," by the insurance plan.

When he first presented similar recommendations to Congress in 1945, the White House called the plan a "compulsory system" in which all wage earners would participate, as they now do in the Social Security program.

Taft for Voluntary Plan

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) favors a voluntary health insurance plan in which citizens could join or not as they choose. Taft, chairman of the GOP policy committee, has not pressed for action this session on his own measure.

In an obvious reference to charges by Taft that the 1945 program was "socialized medicine," Mr. Truman said:

"An insurance plan is the American way of accomplishing our objective. Patients can and will be as free to select their own doctors as they are today. Doctors and hospitals can and will be free to participate or to reject participation.

The poor are not the only ones who cannot afford adequate medical care, the President pointed out.

"The truth is that all except the rich may at some time be struck by illness which requires care and services they cannot afford. Countless families who are entirely self-supporting in every other respect cannot meet the expense of serious illness."

"In peace as in war, the Chief Executive said, "healthy citizens constitute our greatest national resource.

"The welfare and security of our Nation demand that the opportunity for good health be made available to all, regardless of residence, race or economic status."

Would Spread Risk

Earlier, in his 1945 message, President Truman pointed out tha Preident Truman pointed out that five million, one-third of all those examined, were rejected in the draft.

"Although the individual or even small groups of individuals cannot, successfully or economically plan to meet the cost of illness, large groups of people can do so," Mr. Truman told Congress.

"If the financial risk of illness

Funeral Follows Route

Slain D. C. Policeman Covers His Beat for the Last Time

Police Pvt. Hubert W. Estes, shot to death by a disbarred lawyer, covered his 9th st. nw. beat for the last time yesterday.

Twenty-five motorcycle police, a color guard and an honor guard of some 200 other policemen accompanied him. It was his funeral procession, and in special tribute it went over the route he had patrolled during most of his 21 years on the District force.

Some three hours later, at 2 p. m., rites for Ray E. Devendorf, clerk in the office of the Municipal Court's Committee on Admissions and Grievances, also slain by Daniel Williams last Friday, were held at the S. H. Hines Co. funeral home.

The Rev. Robert J. Plumb, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, 3d and A sts. se., officiated at Mr. Devendorf's services. His son, Douglas P. Devendorf of Mayville, Ill., and his sister, Miss Grace Devendorf of 212 Whitestone pl., Silver Spring, Md., were among the 50 at the rites.

Services for Devendorf were followed by a private cremation service at the Fort Lincoln Crematorium.

The 200 uniformed men who formed a guard of honor for Private Estes' body included members of the Park and Capitol Police forces, the Police Academy and the Police Training School. They were headed by Acting Police Superintendent Walter H. Thomas.

Relief Family Given $315 Suite To Keep It Intact

New York, May 19 (U.P.).—A father on city relief said in court today that the department of welfare has provided his family of seven with a $315-a-month hotel suite just off Fifth Avenue with maid service and money for food, clothing and laundry.

The 35-year-old father appeared in domestic relations court to explain why one of his five children was not in school. He said he has received an average of $128 a week from the department. He went on home relief last November when he was unable to pay the $15-a-month rent for a steamless flat.

The welfare department said that it had several cases like this one resulting from the housing shortage. A spokesman said that the only alternative was to break up the family and lodge the children and parents in separate shelters which would be "a more costly plan."

Snyder Tells House Group Tax Reduction Is Approaching

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder told a House Committee yesterday that "a period of tax reduction is approaching" but declined to say definitely when it should start.

His statement bolstered speculation that the Truman administration will get behind some tax cuts in the next calendar year, but will continue to oppose any slashes in 1947.

Snyder himself kept aloof from the current party-line fight over the Senate-revised Knutson bill, paring four billion from the individual income tax rates starting July 1.

The House Ways and Means Committee, launching an over-all study into possibilities of comprehensive tax revision next year, called Snyder as first witness.

The Secretary of the Treasury wholeheartedly indorsed "this approach to the tax problem . . . as a first step towards the development of a postwar tax system," but added:

"It is not my intention today to make recommendations on any specific tax question."

Republican members wanted to know when and how much the Administration thought taxes could be reduced. Snyder sidestepped. He said we are nearing lower levels of Government

Industry Geared For War Is Urged

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

How good is your memory? Can you recall the anxious times five years back when American industry was straining to the limit to convert from peace to war? The desperate worries as daily enemy victories were reported and plane and tank production moved so slowly upward?

The job was done. United States arms production turned the tide. But it took three years or more and about everything we had to beat our plowsharers into spears.

Next time, say defense chiefs we cannot count on having three years to mobilize industry. Or two years. Or one..

If America goes to war again, the homeland will not be just the arsenal for democracy, they are convinced. It will be in the front lines.

See No Immediate War

Most Army and Navy officials see no immediate prospect of war—and probably little likelihood of it within five years at least. But they are not optimistic over the long-range situation. And a great majority believe that, when and if it comes, it will strike America first.

Therefore, they are urging that we make careful plans today calculated to get industry into full war production far faster than before.

Congress, defense officials declare, must back up our new foreign policy with these steps to give it meaning:

1. Provide the necessary legislation and money to assure that an American aircraft industry, a shipbuilding industry and an ordnance industry exist. There need be only a nucleus of expansion, but they must be "in being" supported by subsidy if necessary.

Ask Three Billion Dollars

2. Maintain some 100 arms plants and 100,000 machine tool—which were built with Government funds during the war—in a standby condition ready for use in an emergency.

3. Vote three billion dollars during the next five years to purchase and stockpile such strategic and critical raw materials—not produced in the United States in sufficient quantities—as tungsten, copper, rubber.

4. Approve pending legislation, calling for the creation of a national industrial resources board—to make top-level plans for industrial mobilization—and an Army-Navy Munitions Board with definite, legal authority over current arms production.

The unhealthy condition of the aircraft industry has been fairly well aired of late. Current plane building is well below the minimum set 18 months ago by the Federal Air Coordinating Committee as necessary to provide an industry capable of expansion to war needs.

Aim is Too Low

And, Maj. Gen. Fred Anderson informs The Post, this minimum aim of 3000 military planes a year is too low. General Anderson, assisstant chief of the AAF staff, declares it was based on the expectation Russia would shut down plane building.

The AAF, Anderson says, is planning to recommend to the ACC that an annual minimum production of 5000 military planes is necessary now and when world stability is assure. Last year American industry built about 1330 military aircraft.

As a result of the united efforts of the Army and Navy and the aircraft industry, Congress is now considering this crucial problem. A well-rounded program is needed, not just orders for warplanes.

For example, solution of the all-weather flying problem would lead to a great expansion of commercial plane building. So would the creation of a real air freight industry. Both will need extensive Federal subsidy.

Radford Has Solution

Vice Admiral Arthur Radford, former deputy chief of naval operations for air and now the top task force commander of the Atlantic Fleet, told The Post that a program patterned after the Jones-White Shipbuilding Subsidy Act might be the best solution. The Jones-White Act provided Federal funds to shipbuilders and operators for constructing and running merchant ships with built-in military features.

Maj. Gen. Elwood Quesada, commander of the AAF Tactical Air Force, suggested that a larger number of planes be ordered by the Army and Navy each year than at present. To keep planes in service from becoming obsolete, he proposed putting arbitrary age limits on each craft and each type. Plane builders thus would have to design entirely new aircraft every couple of years and not merely improve on existing designs.

Naval officials are much concerned about the future of the ordnance and shipbuilding industries—particularly the former. Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, Atlantic Fleet commander, told The Post he believed the ordnance stiuation was worse than the more publicized plane problem.

"The only civilian demand for ordnance is for sporting rifles and shotguns," he declared. "Our Bureau of Ordnance people right now are trying to talk two companies from dropping out of fire control production. There is no money in it for them".

Recalls Earlier Effort

The situation recalls the efforts of Army officials to keep American companies from getting out of the business of powder production after World War I. Two of the latter were induced to continue—only to regret it when branded as "merchants of death" during the Nye Committee munitions probe in the '30s.

Army and Navy officials hope Congress will consider at this session legislation authorizing the retention of some 100 arms plants and 100,000 machine tools as a war reserve. All of them would not be idle, under the plan. As many as possible would be leased or sold for peace-time use, with strings attached requiring they be available for defense production in an emergency.

The Army-Navy plan for stockpiling raw materials originally called for spending $2,100,000,000 over five years. Rising costs have boosted the expected price of the materials by 25 to 50 per cent. Only 100 million dollars of this big program has been voted as yet.

The entire, vital industrial mobilization program requires the careful attention and support of Congress. Otherwise, America's new foreign policy will have no solid backing. A first step is passage of the Army-Navy unification bill providing for top-level mobilization planning.

cas of the Union Baptist Church in Arlington, Va., cited a similarity between his own duty as a clergyman and that of a policeman. Both, he said, tried to save lives and protect the citizens, but Private Estes was killed in the line of duty, he added.

Among the 150 civilians who attended the services were the patrolman's widow, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Estes, 2718 N. Lorcum ln., Arlington, whose father, Detective Sergt. Robert Sanders, once headed the police narcotics bureau; his four children, three sisters and four brothers.

Six privates from No. 1 Precinct were the pallbearers: M. I. Bridges, A. P. Scherl, R. L. Jenkins, C. K. Daub, N. S. Jones and M. L. Legate. The color guard consisted of Pvts. Frank P. Behnke, No. 12; William O'Connor, No. 7; Oliver T. Coffin, No. 5, and Paul F. Moran, No. 4.

The honor guard included, besides Superintendent Thomas, Inspectors Milton D. Smith, Oscar J. Letterman, Arthur E. Miller and Ira E. Keck. Another member was Lieut. David McCutcheon, who in 1926 "broke in" Pvt. Estes on his beat.

Passing the No. 1 Precinct Station at 413 New Jersey ave. nw., the funeral cortege was saluted by some 50 police there, and by firemen of the No. 1 Engine and No. 3 Truck Companies, whose station is next door. The procession continued to Cedar Hill Cemetery where burial took place.

Meanwhile, Williams' two other victims, who were shot but not fatally, in the affray which began at the Municipal Court and ended at 6th and F sts., were both reported in good condition last night and improved since Sunday, as was Williams himself at Gallinger Hospital.

George W. Dalzell, secretary of the committee on admissions and grievances, first one to be shot, was "getting along fine," according to authorities at Emergency Hospital. Cecil A. Claig, civil guard at the court, who finally captured Williams, was "doing well" at the Marine Hospital in Baltimore.

Anita Colby, a Brainy Eyeful, Dips Oar Into C. U.'s Play Festival

By Richard L. Coe

ABOUT PEOPLE YOU KNOW—or orta:

ANITA COLBY: Her eyes are hazel and as you can see from her picture, she's very beautiful. . . . Also brainy enough to make even more money by staying out of the camera range as a studio executive. . . . Which, with a phiz like that, is superbrainy. . . . At luncheon yesterday she held to a conversational level established by such folk as the Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, rector of Catholic University, and Eric Johnston, by whose office American films are so mightily affected. . . . Miss Colby was here with another Paramounter, John Byram, play editor of the studio. . . . to discuss the Motion Picture Academy's role in sending guest stars to appear in the Playwriting Festival of Father Hartke's noted group. . . . Father Hartke stressed that his students are "no longer youngsters, but mature people who need opportunities here and elsewhere." . . . This is the Festival's great point. . . . It doesn't much matter whether the plays are immediately grabbed off by Broadway or Hollywood. . . . Though no one's saying "No" to that, either. . . . We told Paramount's Byram that since the movies want musicals, what about "Sing Out Sweet Land," the C. U. original? . . . Frank Sinatra is interested, and it seems to us Metro would be smart to grab it for him. . . . How about it, you Lion?

Anita Colby

RUTH DRAPER: The Queen of the Mono-Dramas will do one performance next Monday night at the Statler . . . She hasn't been here for sometime and this appearance will benefit a boys' school and church in the small French town of Vire, in Normandy . . . The American Friends of France and the St. Matthew's Committee are the sponsors and the French Ambassador and Mme Bonnet will attend . . . Miss Draper will offer some new sketches as well as several of her favorites . . . She did a five-week season in New York this winter after completing a longer one in London . . . Nephew Paul Draper who's been doing brief concerts with harmonica man Adler, indicates this business of entertaining large numbers with one person's artistry must run in the family . . . And with Cornelia Otis Skinner occupying herself nowadays with fully-peopled plays, Miss Draper is still undisputed ruler of her demanding art . . . Tickets at Friends of France HQ. 1733 Conn. ave.

ELAINE PHINNEY: You're not expected to know her . . . But she might be fun to see for a brief moment . . . We haven't but we've heard of her . . . She lives at 7 Chester ave., Chelsea, Mass., and she's seen "The Jolson Story" 56 times . . . And says this is only the beginning . . . she knows every word, every action of the picture. . . . She's trailed the thing to all the theaters 'roun' her home and estimates she's spent 27 bucks in the process. . . . Spent more over the weekend going to New York where she seems to have occupied every waking (or sleeping?) moment watching Larry Parks and listening to Al's voice. . . . Nope, she's not crazy. . . . She's a teenager.

BING CROSBY: The amenable character of the golf links certainly did his part in the junevile delinquency fund drive. . . . So far as our telephone calls indicate, he could stay in Washington forever. . . . Everyone wants to meet Bing. . . . You might stay until June 10, Bing, when Bop Hope will catch up with you. . . . He'll be here for his final broadcast of the season that Tuesday night. . . . Then he'll take off for his first real vacation in nine years. . . . Heading south to Rio, on the road to which you traveled so merrily. . . . Eddie Arnold was anot er of the weekend heroes. . . . His sporting affability is still the talk of all who were out at Columbia Country Club.

THE TUNESMEN: As the Capitol's only holdover stage act in years and years, the boys are set for a week at Loew's State N. Y. . . . Which has taken the place of the movie-ized Palace as the vaudevillians' top-spot . . . In a couple of weeks they'll hit Broadway, for which, in a large ad of the current Variety, they're thanking the Capitol's Gene Ford, Sidney Piermont and Eddie Leonard.

ERIC HODGINS: The author of that merry best-seller on housebuilding, "Mr. Brandings Builds His Dream House," has reached Hollywood . . . Where he'll "study the script that has been contrived" from his book . . . RKO's Dore Schary bought the rights, his first post after assuming production responsibility at the studio . . . We're wondering if a romantic triangle has been introduced into that "contrived" script . . . If it has and anyone at RKO is interested we'll tell them what we wrote about "The Egg and I." . . . Be careful of Blandings, Dore!

AMATEUR LIFE: American University's drama department is playing "The Merry Wives of Windsor" tonight in its outdoor theater, Massachusetts and Nebraska aves. . . . . Costumes for the events are being loaned by the Shakespearean Society of Washington through President Del Floyd. . . . The university prides itself on being "the only drama group in the area which produces Shakespeare traditionally". . . . And it's mighty proud of that outdoor theater. . . . In case of rain, the show'll go on Thursday night. . . . Another play group working tonight is that of Valerie Warde. . . . "Growing Pains" is the bill. . . . Cafritz Auditorium, 16th and Q, the place. . . . In the leads are Margaret Mary Myers, George Tennyson, Edith Wagner, Jack Kaiser, Barbara Hill, John Dennie, Billie Sue Best and Ricky Schulze.

Court Rules For Newsmen

we can see no difference, though the conduct of the attorneys, of the jury, or even of the judge himself, may have reflected on the court. Those who see and hear what transpired can report it with impunity. There is no special prerequisite of the judiciary which enables it, as distinguished from other institutions of democratic government, to suppress, edit, or censor events which transpire in proceedings before it . . .

". . . the news articles were by any standard an unfair report of what transpired. But inaccuracies in reporting are commonplace. Certainly a reporter could not be laid by the heels for contempt because he misses the essential point in a trial or failed to summarize the issues to accord with the views of the judge who sat on the case. . . .

Judge Criticized

"(The editorial) was, we assume, an unjust criticism. But a judge may not hold in contempt one who ventures to publish anything that tends to make him unpopular or to belittle him. . . . The law of contempt is not made for the protection of judges who may be sensitive to the winds of public opinion. Judges are supposed to be men of fortitude, able to thrive in a hardy climate."

As for the news of what citizens proposed to do about the decision, Douglas said that even if the citizens were guilty of contempt, "freedom of the press may not be denied a newspaper which brings their conduct to the public eye."

to murder and with accessory before the fact—seven defendants.

Charged with murder, conspiracy to murder, and accessory both before and after the fact—21 defendants.

Those acquitted on all counts are Earle Martin, member of a wealthy Greenville family, and taxi-driver Vardry McBee Norris and Enrest Stokes. They made no statements to police, and the court held they had not been connected with the lynching.

Those winning partial acquittal were Woodrow Wilson Clardy and Samuel D. Stewart, who likewise refused to make statements; Willie Engene Bishop, W. D. Oakley and Howard Thompson, whom the court found were not at the scene of the murder, and John B. Marchant and James Arthur Fowler, who saw Negro Willie Earle taken from Pickens County jail, but who did not witness the murder.

Oakley, a Greenville cafe operator, told police he thought the lynching party was "a joke" until the mob seized the Negro.

Marchant, like Earle Martin a member of a prominent South Carolina family, told police he followed the mob of taxi drivers out of excitement but did not tarry at the roadside when Earle was beaten, knifed and finally slain with a shut gun.

Thirty-One Arrested

Thirty-one persons subsequently were arrested, and 26 of them made statements to police and agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Roosevelt Carlos Hurd, sr., is named in three specific counts of the indictment as responsible for murder. Eight statements named him as the executioner who fired three charges of quail shot into the lynch-victim. Hurd, himself, denied this, although acknowledging he took part in the lynching.

By ruling of the court, incriminating statements which designated Hurd as the "trigger man" are disallowed as evidence against him. Solicitor Robert Ashmore said after recess he was disappointed with the ruling, but declared the prosecution would no falter in its attempt to convict 2 persons of murder, and all 28 of conspiracy to commit murder.

2500 to Fly To Jobs in Alaska

San Francisco (U.P.)—Pan American World Airwayse plans to fly 2500 men from Seattle to Fairbanks, Alaska, this year in one of the largest mass movements of construction workers by commercial air carrier.

Men are being recruited throughout the United States by several Seattle firms under contract to the United States Army Engineer Corps, for work on large building installations near Fairbanks.

A series of fights will continue through the spring and early summer. The men make the 1700-mile trip in eight hours, leaving Seattle one morning and reporting for work the next.

St. Andrew's Gown Added to Collection

Philadelphia, (U.P.)—A cap, gown and hood from St. Andrew's University, Scotland, has been added to the extensive collection of Frankliniana at the University of Pennsylvania.

The clothing, similar to that work by Benjamin Franklin when he received the honorary degree of doctor of laws from St. Andrew's, was presented to the university in connection with its 1947 founder's day observance.

The cap, gown and hood were a gift from the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. Franklin founded the University of Pennsylvania in 1751.

other foreign programs, Taber said:

"We can do nothing until they come to us with the facts, and explain their plans and tell us exactly how they propose to use these funds.

"When we have the estimates, hearings will be held to cover all the relief and assistance programs at one time so that we can get an accurate picture of what the Administration has in mind. But we will have to have facts before we can act."

Taber emphasized that no immediate appropriations were needed, and certainly not before June 30, to carry out either the Greek-Turkish or post-UNRRA programs.

'Daylight' After Sunset Planned in City Square

San Francisco (U.P.)—Union Square, a block-sized area of lawns, shrubs, flowers and sidewalks over the top of a large underground garage in the center of San Francisco's business district, soon will be the brightest spot in town.

The city will install 16 mercury vapor lights, each giving off twice as much lights as lamps now in use. They will replace the six street lights now rimming the square.

Utility Manager James H. Turner said the new lighting would give the square its nearest possible approach to "post-sunset sunlight" and will make the area as safe for pedestrian and automobile traffic at night "as in broad daylight."

Texas Chickens Head Toward South Pole

Waco, Tex. (U.P.)—Irving L. Bush, who has chicken hatcheries here and at Clinto, Mo., hardly can wait for the Ronne Antarctic expedition to set up camp in the land of perpetual ice and snow to find out how his chickens will fare.

Five white leghorn hens and one rooster were taken by Comdr. Finn Ronne when he set sail from Beaumont, Tex., on an 18-month scientific expedition to the Antarctic. As far as anyone knows, these chickens are the first to head alive for the South Pole.

Bush is anxious to find out whether the hens will lay any eggs in the Antarctic and whether chickens hatched in subzero temperatures will thrive.

Senator Pinch-Hits For Ball Players

Abington, Mass. (U.P.)—When 13-year-old Danny Lynch wrote to the "Washiington Senators, Washington, D. C.," for a picture of the American League baseball team, the letter was delivered by error to Senator Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts.

"I'm not one of their first-string players," said the Senator, "but I want to send Danny my picture, anyway." He did, and then forwarded Danny's requeest to the baseball Senators.

Town Craves Onions But Not Pie

Raymondville, Tex. (U.P.)—Onion pies are no longer served in cafes at this Southwestern "onion capital."

Promoters of the Willacy County Onion Fiesta, who long claimed they could prepare a full five-course dinner from onions, said they had learned from past boycotts that there was no demand for onion pie.

"Only a few out of towners bought it," they lamented. "So our eating places stopped baking them."

How Scripts Are Born

New York, May 19.—The most difficult translating assignment of the year was the one given to the group accompanying Spyros Skouras on his tour of South America. Mr. Skouras' brothers insist that they all speak not only broken English but also broken Greek, and a few broken words of Spanish and Portuguese . . . It was Gregory Ratoff who had to do some emergency dictation at the Twentieth Century-Fox lot, and was given a new stenographer. He warned her that his accent is strange, but few understand it, and that the script he was dictating was so important that if there was a single word she couldn't understand, she should interrupt him and have him spell it for her. The lady took his dictation for three hours, without once interrupting. "Vahndairfool," beamed Ratoff . . . "Not at all" shrugged the lady. "My last job was for Spyros Skouras."

Merman

Ethel Merman, jr., made a drawing of a horse and gave it to her mother, who said: "But this horse has five legs." The youngster explained: "I gave him five legs, in case he breaks one" . . . Sophie Tucker is doing the most remarkable work of her long career, at the Latin Quarter.

Fred Keating, the magician-comedian now at the Club 66, once applied for a job at the N. Y. World, and was interviewed by H. B. Swope, who asked him to discuss the day's news, identify names, etc. Keating, who had exaggerated his experience, couldn't meet the test . . . Keating's uncle had asked Swope to give Fred a job, and the editor had agreed. He finally roared at the applicant: "Look here—are you a graduate of the Columbia School of Journalism?" . . . "No," said Keating, deciding to tell the truth and leave . . . "Then," Swope told him, "you're hired."

Constance Collier celebrates her 64th year as an actress by playing a role in "Perils of Pauline," the new Paramount film. Miss Collier played "Macbeth" with Sir Herbert Tree and for a while was engaged to marry Max Beerbohm, who modeled one of his characters in her honor. "I refused to marry Max," said Miss Collier, "because he had carpet slippers on his soul." . . . In "Perils of Pauline" Miss Collier has custard pies thrown into her face by Hank Mann and Chester Conklin.

Isador Kresel, the lawyer who was awarded a fee of more than $500,000 by Justice Eder, was disappointed. He expected more than one million dollars for his brilliant legal work which covered three years of research. Income taxes will take more than 82 per cent of this fee. . . . Arturo Toscanini expects to take 27 musicians to Ridgefield, Conn., in September to play a concert there for benefit of the Ridgefield Public Library . . . The story printed here last month about Jimmy Walker being laid to rest without any cuff links in his shirt—the expensive links were removed just before interment—has been confirmed by the estate's lawyers. The links will be kept for his son.

Relations between the royal families of Sweden and the Netherlands now are strained. The estrangement came when Prince Bernhardt flew to Stockholm to report to King Gustaf about the death of his grandson, Hereditary Prince Gustaf Adolf, in the KLM plane accident at Copenhagen. This was the crash in which Grace Moore also was a victim . . . King Gustaf berated Prince Bernhardt for having permitted a future King of Sweden to leave Holland in a commercial plane, instead of in a plane with special pilots and crew . . . That's why Prince Bernhardt, distressed at this outburst, went home without attending the funeral.

During the development of the puncture-sealing tubeless tire, announced by B. F. Goodrich, the engineers assigned to its development used the code word "Pstt" in referring to the tire. . . . Emmett Lavery, author of "The Magnificent Yankee," and Arthur Hopkins, the producer, are working on a new play for Louis Calhern next season. The play is about a priest named Fenelon, who foresaw the French Revolution and tried to educate a successor to Louis XIV. "Fenelon, the priest, was tall and spare and he had a large nose," Lavery told Calhern, who replied: "That fits me. But the spiritual qualities will have to come from you and Mr. Hopkins."

signed a false name to passport papers on September 1, 1932.

Hewitt, who said he studied revolutionary technique in Moscow on orders from the Communist Party, has testified to meeting Marzani at Communist meetings in New York at which the defendant used the name "Tony Whales."

Hewitt admitted that he "knew the matters set out in the (passport) application were false and were being given in a Government document."

Certain State Department and War Department documents which had been subpenaed by the defense could not be produced in court, for reasons of "security," Ford told reporters yesterday.

Garson Kanin, Hollywood and New York playwright, who worked with Marzani during the war producing information films for troops, will testify today, Ford said. The case is expected to go to the jury tomorrow afternoon.

Youth Changes Plea to Guilty, Waives Jury In Strangling of Seaman at Winchester

Winchester, Va., May 19 (AP).—George T. Ridgewell, 19, of Portland, Me., on the eve of his trial in Frederick County Circuit Court on a murder charge in the death of Frederick A. Currie of Grosse Pointe, Mich., today changed his original plea of innocent to guilty and waived a jury trial.

Ridgewell appeared before Judge Elliott Marshall shortly before noon and through counsel expressed a desire to change his original plea. After the waving of jury trial, the court canceled a summons for a venire of 25 county residents for jury duty tomorrow.

Judge Marshall will hear the case, at which the Portland sailor will be represented by court-appointed counsel, Herbert S. Larrick and Joseph A. Massie.

Ridgewell was one of two youths indicted by a Frederick County grand jury for murder in the death of Currie, a Navy seaman first class, near here last December 23.

A venire of 25 persons has been summoned for Thursday for the selection of a jury to hear the case against William C. Hall, 19, St. Louis, Mo., discharged Navy man, who was indicted with Ridgewell.

Hall and Ridgewell, arraigned before Judge Elliott Marshall on March 17, entered pleas of innocent. The two youths have been held without bond in jails here and at Berryville since their apprehension and return to Winchester.

Hall voluntarily surrendered himself to Los Angeles, Calif., police last January and was returned to this city. The Federal Bureau of Investigation traced Ridgewell to a New York City address by means of a girl's photograph.

The body of Currie was found in the snow beside U. S. Highway 50, a mile east of here, last December 26. Police found near the scene a wallet containing Navy papers which they said bore Hall's name.

Two Anglers Hurt

Thurmont, Md., May 19 (AP).—Two fishermen were injured while angling for trout at Fishing Creek during the eighth annual meeting of the Brotherhood of the Jungle Cock at Camp Airy in Frederick County.

Talbott Denmead of Baltimore, former director of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, broke his hip when he slipped on a wet rock and fell while casting for trout that had been stocked in the stream.

Ben Ault of Silver Spring, Md., broke his right wrist in a similar accident during the three-day outdoor festival. Two hundred members of the sporting club and their 50 boy guests attended the meeting from 14 Eastern States and one Canadian province.

W. M. Speaker Named

Williamsburg, Va., May 19.—Dr. John Newton Thomas, professor of theology at Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, will be the baccalaureate speaker at the College of William and Sunday, June 8, Dr. John E. Pomfret, president, announced today.

Gardner Release Asked

Fredericksburg, Va., May 19 (AP).—A petition asking the release of William Reeves Gardner, 46, from the State penitentiary, where he is serving a seven-year term for embezzlement of funds of the Farmers and Merchants State Bank, Fredericksburg, has been signed by "several persons," John D. Butzner, jr., said Saturday.

Butzner, an attorney for Gardner, would not disclose on what grounds the petition asked Gardner's release. He refused, also, to say whether it asked pardon or parole for the bank's former vice president.

Gardner was granted a severance in a recent Federal trial because of a heart ailment. Nine other persons tried in Federal District Court were convicted of aiding and abetting Gardner in misapplication of $435,000 in bank funds.

Fredericksburg Rites

Fredericksburg, Va., May 19.—Annual Memorial Day exercises for the dead of all wars will be held here May 30, according to plans made by the Confederate Ladies' Memorial Association and the American Legion.

Civic, fraternal, patriotic and other organizations will gather at the Confederate Cemetery at 4:30 p. m. for rites there and then will march to the National Cemetery for the concluding and principal exercises.

Governor, How Cruel!

Richmond, Va., May 19 (AP). The State of Virginia has ruled out one of its beautiful landmarks.

An order from Governor Tuck has directed that no more will pretty girls be seen eating their lunches on the rolling lawns of Capitol Square.

Such scenes are pleasing to the Governor, but the esthetic sacrifice is being made in the interest of the health of an extensive span of grass.

Rites For M. H. Homes

Frederick, Va., May 19.—Funeral services were held at the home in Stafford County today at 2 p. m. for Milton H. Homes, 75, who died Saturday in a hospital in Alexandria, where he underwent an operation two weeks ago. Homes is survived by his wife, Mrs. Agnes Homes; five daughters, Mrs. Ella Groves and Mrs. Martha Harrison of Washington; Mrs. Flossie Pumphrey of Falls Church; Mrs. Mary Arrington of Warrenton, and Mrs. Ethel DeShields of Stafford County; two sons, George French Homes of Stafford County and Chester Homes of Chatham Heights; 14 grandchildren and 3 great-grandchildren.

Jaycees' State Program

Cumberland, Md., May 19 (AP).—The Maryland Junior Chamber of Commerce today was on record in favor of "greater efficiency and economy in government at all levels."

Delegates at the group's annual convention here yesterday also indorsed the church world service program for foreign relief and a program of jaycee extension in Maryland.

John Jacobs, Salisbury attorney, was installed as president of the State group as the three-day meeting came to an end. Jacobs succeeds J. Rutledge Clark of Baltimore.

Special mention was made by the awards committee of Hagerstown's educational program and Frederick's sports program.

Will Attend FBI Course

Winchester, Va., May 19.—Sergt. J. C. Ritter of the Winchester Police Force will attend the next session of the FBI National Academy starting at Washington on July 14. The school lasts 12 weeks and covers all phases of police work. Sergt. Ritter, who is a veteran of World War II, will be the first member of the local force to take the training program.

Personnel Aides Named

Richmond, Va., May 19 (AP).—Governor Tuck has announced appointment of a three-man advisory committee to confer with the Governor and J. H. Bradford, personnel director, on State personnel administration.

Committee members—all leaders in Virginia's General Assembly—are Senator John S. Battle of Charlottesville; Delegate Charles C. Louderback of Stanley, and Delegate E. Blackburn Moore of Berryville.

Battle is chairman of the Senate finance committee, Louderback, chairman of the House appropriations committee, and Moore, chairman of the House committee on confirmations.

New Plane for Police

Richmond, Va., May 19 (AP).—Approval of State Police Superintendent Charles W. Woodson's request to purchase a small transport plane for his department was announced by the Governor's office today. The plane—a Beechcraft Model 35—would cost the State $7,975 with delivery charges of about $150.

The State police already operate three lighter ships from fields at Richmond, Pulaski and Lynchburg, but these are merely used as an adjunct to ground police work in traffic direction or apprehension of law breakers.

Memorial Rites Set

Luray, Va., May 19.—Senator A. Willis Robertson and Representative Burr Harrison will be the principal speakers at the annual Memorial Day exercises to be held in Page Theater June 1, it was announced by the American Legion post. Exercises will be followed by a procession to Green Hill Cemetery, where flowers will be placed on graves.

Will Discuss Doctrine

Luray, Va., May 19.—A panel discussion of the "Truman Doctrine" will be featured by the Luray World Citizenshoip Council at the next meeting, Thursday, at 8 p. m. Dr. Fred Wampler, program chairman, said yesterday. Dr. Wampler, Darwin Lambert and the Rev. Donald Royer will present their views after which the question will be discussed generally. The program inaugurates a series that the council hopes will devepop into town meetings.

Finds 1901 Tortoise

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., May 19.—G. E. Michael, farmer, residing in Sleepy Creek district, found a tortoise on which he had carved his initials in 1901. It was found on the same farm where he initialed it 46 years ago.

Brawl, Kerosene Probed in Danville Fire Fatal to Four

Danville, Va., May 19 (AP).—Police today were investigating circumstances of a fire which claimed the lives of four Negroes here early Sunday, following reports that kerosene had saturated at least one room of the tenement dwelling during a fight prior to the fire which occurred at 3 a. m.

Police had been called to the home several hours before the fire after receiving complaints of a fight. Officers found no fighting when they arrived but declared they observed wrecked furniture and saw kerosene spilled about the floor.

Those who perished were Daisy Royal, 28; her daughter, Barbara Jean Royal, 6; son, James William Royal, 4, and Alphone Fitzgerald, a roomer.

Another daughter of the victim, Elizabeth Royal Glass, was hospitalized with burns sustained in fleeing the burning building along with five others. She was treated at Winslow Hospital and later released.

Berkeley to Open Memorial Park

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 19.—Berkeley County's new but unfinished war memorial park will be opened Tuesday afternoon with a public picnic for which Martinsburg grocers will provide food free of charge, Industrialist Garland L. Dunn, head of the memorial association, said.

The outing also will mark the beginning of a house-to-house drive to complete the raising of $100,000 for the park. Dunn said about $43,000 of the total was raised in a campaign last fall.

Wreckage of Navy Plane in Crash Killing Three

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

AIR SHOW'S END—Remains of a Navy Corsair fighter plane lie strewn at a Burlington, Iowa, street intersection after going out of control at an air show and crashing on a school playground Sunday. The pilot and two schoolboys were killed, and six other young persons were seriously injured

Plan Opposed To Change Md. Firemen Setup

Frederick, Md., May 19 (Spl.).—Bitter opposition to a proposal of the Anne Arundel County Firemen's Association to supplant the present five-man executive committee selected by each incoming president, was expressed yesterday at a meeting of officers of the Maryland State Firemen's Association here.

The Anne Arundel proposal recommends that the State be divided into seven district, each to be comprised of an equal number of adjacent companies, and that each district elect a member of the exe-district elect a member of the executive committee.

The plan drew unanimous opposition of the present executive committee. Vigorous opposition was voiced by Boland B. Duke, Leonardtown; Phil Ryan, Mount Rainier; C. William Ecton, Hagerstown; B. H. Shipley, Ellicott City; S. T. Culver, Hebron, and Karl A. Young, Mount Rainier.

It was indicated that a torrid fight will develop if the proposal is brought to the floor of the State convention in Frostburg June 18-20.

The request of Cambridge for the 1948 convention was favorably received by the State officials yesterday. It was recommended that the annual membership fee in the State association be increased from $15 to $25. W. Bartgis Storm, this city, State president, presided over the meeting.

Horses, Buggies, Autos Taken in Stride

Columbiana, Ala. (U.P.).—Thirty-one years ago this month T. C. Rush became postal carrier on mail route No. 2. Today, four horses, two buggies, and 14 automobiles later. Rush is still on the route.

Only seven of his original patrons are still with him. He has never missed a delivery and has swum across flood-swollen creeks and driven through forest fires to carry the mail.

WAA Auctions Delayed In Baltimore, Richmon

Baltimore, May 19 (AP).—Postponement of experimental public auction sales originally scheduled by the War Assets Administration to be held in Richmond, Va., May 20 and 21, and in Baltimore May 22 and 23, has been announced by Joseph M. Armstrong, WAA regional director in Richmond.

Armstrong said more time is desired to study methods for the satisfaction of all priority claimants under the auction method.

5 Die, 7 Hurt In Md. Traffic Over Weekend

By The Associated Press

Traffic accidents over the weekend claimed the lives of five persons and injured at least seven, State police said yesterday.

Robert Gesell, 18, of Westminster, was killed when a car in which he was riding overturned on the Hanover pike. Three other passengers were hurt.

Edmund Jansen, 26, of Baltimore, and Randall Phillips, also 26, died in a head-on collision of two automobiles in which four other persons suffered injuries on the Philadelphia highway.

Three-year-old James Rubeck of Clearspring was killed when struck by a car on a highway near Big Spring, State police said.

Richard Hamilton, 19, of Urbana, was killed near Frederick when he ran into a Washington-bound bus as he was crossing the street, State police reported. State Trooper Charles McLane said witnesses told him Hamilton alighted from one bus and walked into the path of a second vehicle. Driver of the bus, Charles Henry Mercer, Frederick, was released pending completion of an investigation, McLane said.

Doctor's Refusal To Rehire Veteran Upheld by Court

Richmond, Va., May 19 (AP).—The United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals today affirmed the Baltimore District Court in its ruling that it would be unreasonable to require a Baltimore physician to reinstate a veteran on the prewar terms of his employment.

In an opinion written by Judge D. Lawrence Groner, chief justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, the court declared that the credit collection accounts of Dr. Jacob W. Barenburg had "so decreased that he no longer required the services of a salaried collector."

For this reason, the court said, it would be unreasonable to require the reinstatement of Louis J. Meyers at his former salary to collect delinquent accounts.

Navy Praises 4 Who Saved Downed Pilot

Leonardtown, Md., May 19 (AP).—Four St. Marys County residents have been commended and two of them recommended for medals in connection with rescuing a Coast Guard pilot from his wrecked airplane, the United States Naval Air Station at Patuxent announced today.

The pilot was Lieut. Louis P. O'Neill, whose plane crashed at St. Marys City last March.

Frank Murawski, Navy motor machinist, was commended for forcing open the jammed cockpit of the plane and lifting O'Neill to safety. Murawski was recommended to receive the Navy and Marine Corps Medal.

Michael Kohut, Army veteran, was recommended for the Carnegie Hero Medal. He helped Murawski extricate O'Neill from the plane just before it burst into flames, and Navy commendation said his "quick action undoubtedly saved the pilot's life."

Two other civilians commended were Joseph Gohut, "who originated an emergency telephone call to the air station and whose conduct aided materially in organizing the crash party," and Richard Cook, who drove the pilot to the air station dispensary, "18 minutes after he struck the ground."

Murawski, who is stationed in San Francisco, was on leave visiting relatives in St. Marys City at the time of the crash.

Poison Death Of Woman Probed In Prince Georges

Mrs. Myrtle Cooper, 52, 2802 Upshur st., Mount Rainier, Md., died yesterday at Washington Sanitarium Hospital from poison.

Dr. James I. Boyd, county medical examiner, is investigating the facts surrounding the death. Members of the household told Prince Georges police that Mrs. Cooper had been under care of a physician and that she had taken poison tablets by mistake when she intended to take a pain killing medicine.

Mrs. Cooper was taken to the sanitarium late Sunday night and died yesterday at 1:55 p. m. Dr. Boyd said he expects to issue a certificate today.

Oyster Output From Bay Sets All-Time Low

Annapolis, Md., May 19 (AP).—Maryland oyster production, continuing an almost unbroken deadline of 50 years, dropped to 2,150,000 bushels in the 1946-47 season, Chairman Edwin Warfield, jr., of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission, announced today.

The total output was 250,000 bushels under the preceding season, and compares with an annual catch of 12 million bushels during the State's peak years, 1870 to 1890.

Warfield noted that the downward trend has been most pronounced in the Chesapeake Bay, where last season only about 100,000 bushels were taken by the 49 dredgers licensed to operate on bay bars. This appeared to be an all-ime low, Warfield added.

Before the turn of the century the annual catches of four million bushels, with 1200 dredge boats in operation, were reported from the bay.

The bulk of bay production this year came from bars planted by the State, Warfield said.

The drop in total production was caused partly by a heavy mortality of oysters in Kent and Anne Arundel counties and along the Kent shore early last year, he continued, explaining that a prolonged fresh water condition brought about the mortality.

Low production elsewhere was offset somewhat by a good season in the Choptank River, Fishing Bay and upper Tangier Sound.

Despite a severe slump late last October, oyster prices were generally satisfactory, Warfield said. The season's average was $2 a bushel, with a reported high of $3.25 in some areas and a low of $1.25.

In addition to the 49 dredgers operating in the bay, 35 boats were licensed for tributaries last season. Tongers numbered approximately 4000.

Surpluses of Canned Foods Called Threat To Farm Economy; Exports Abroad Urged

Representative Edward T. Miller (R., Md.), yesterday expressed alarm at present surpluses of canned foods which he said threatened the agricultural economy and eventual harm to the overall economy.

"Should the present surplus stocks of canned foods be allowed to remain in this country, the processors will be unable to afford to buy the farm produce," the Eastern Shore Congressman said in a statement. "This would be the beginning of a Nation-wide depression such as we in Congress have been striving to avoid."

Rep. Miller

Miller concurred with a suggestion by the United States Department of Agriculture Council for Maryland that the surplus goods be purchased by the Government for relief of foreign countries. The Tri-State Packers' Association, representing food processors in Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey, urged similar action.

County to Graduate 539

Frederick, Md., May 19.—Frederick County public high schools will graduate 539 students this year, each of them, except Thurmont, a larger number than a year ago. There were 468 county graduates in 1946 and 455 in 1945. Frederick High School heads the list with 284 graduates, followed by Brunswick with 71; Thurmont, 48; Middletown, 40; Lincoln, 35; Walkersville, 33; Emmitsburg, 28. Of the 539 total, 299 are girls and 240 are boys.

Tax Offices Opened

Annapolis, Md., May 19 (AP).—A vigorous Naval Reserve, prepared for any emergency, is an "urgent necessity," Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., Naval Academy superintendent, said today.

In a statement marking the academy's observance of naval reserve week, which began yesterday, Holloway declared, "The citizens of our country have a responsibility to consider seriously enlistment in the new Naval Reserve."

A strong reserve, supplementing the regular services, would be "our best assurance for continued peace," he added.

Academy staff officers prepared to observe the week by speaking before civic and service organizations.

Elgin Fete Set Tonight

Baltimore, May 19 (AP).—An attendance of 600 is expected tomorrow night at a testimonial dinner for Commissioner of Motor Vehicles W. Lee Elgin, banquet chairman Edward F. Requard announced.

The dinner at the Emerson Hotel will mark the eighth anniversary of Elgin's service as commissioner.

Requard said among state leaders who have accepted invitations are Senator Herbert R. O'Conor, former Senator George L. Radcliffe, Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin of Baltimore, Comptroller James J. Lacy, jr., and Congressman George Fallon.

Elgin's present term as commissioner was to run until 1949 but the 1947 legislature passed a "ripper" bill ending it this year. Governor has not yet named a successor.

Area AFL to Hear Green

Baltimore, May 19 (AP).—William Green, president of the AFL, will address the annual convention of the Maryland State and the District of Columbia Federation of Labor here May 28, the union said today. Philip Hannah, Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Mayor-elect Thomas D'Alesandro of Baltimore are listed as other speakers during the convention, May 26-29.

Strong Reserve Urged

Baltimore, Mey 19 (AP).—Headquarters of Maryland's new retail sales tax division, headed by Walter E. Kennedy with a staff of 24 persons, opened here today at 15 West Baltimore st.

All corporations and individuals making sales subject to the two per cent tax must get a license prior to July 1 when the tax becomes effective. Application forms may be obtained at any county courthouse or the local headquarters.

State Comptroller James J. Lacy said a $1 fee should accompany each application, and estimated that approximately 50,000 licenses would be issued.

Drought Damages N. C. Truck Crops

Raleigh, N. C., May 18 (AP).—A drought which has lasted for nearly a month in many sections of North Carolina has damaged some truck crops and has delayed farm operations in general, the State Department of Agriculture reported today.

An Agriculture Department official said that effect of the prolonged dry spell had been felt most severely by early-maturing truck crops, including both potatoes and strawberries.

In addition, planting of tobacco—one of the State's agricultural mainstays—has been delayed by some unseasonable weather, and although most of the cotton and corn acreage has been planted, rain is badly needed to aid in germination.

Takoma Club to Hold 31st Annual Iris Show

The thirty-first annual iris show of the Takoma Horticultural Club will be held Thursday from 8 to 10 p. m. and Friday from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m. at the Takoma branch of the public library, 5th and Cedar sts. nw.

Winner in the iris classes will receive the silver medal of the American Iris Society. A bronze medal will be awarded for second.

Student Activity Leaders to Be Feted

Athletes, cheerleaders and band members of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School will be feted at a banquet tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. at the school.

The annual affair is sponsored by the Parent-Teachers Association.

Bill Werber, former major league baseball player, will be guest speaker. School letters will be presented by Coaches Dorothy Quayle, Ray Fuhrman and Allen Vogt.

Cancer Campaign Passes Halfway Mark in District

The American Cancer Society's local drive for $104,000 has passed the halfway mark with contributions totaling $52,187, the society announced yesterday.

Sixty per cent of the $104,000 will be used to finance clinical facilities for cancer detection and treatment and an educational program here, Ernest H. Edinger, executive director of the society's District division, declared. The balance, he said, will be used by the national society for cancer research.

Local solicitation, which began April 14, will continue through May. Contributions may be mailed to American Cancer Society, Washington 6, D. C.

Knights of Columbus Cancel Tonight's Dance

The Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, announced yesterday cancellation of its Ladies' Night dance scheduled for 9:30 o'clock tonight at the Mayflower Hotel. The function was canceled out of respect for the late Most. Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Washington and Baltimore.

International Trade, a subject vital to all Americans, is discussed in this editorial currently appearing in McGraw-Hill publications. It may be quoted or reprinted with or without credit mention.

WORLD LEADERSHIP . . .
our duty and our opportunity

CAPITALISM in Europe and the rest of the world is challenged by a real and formidable rival, Communism. For capitalism to thrive a reasonable amount of prosperity is essential. Communism uses poverty to advance itself.

Except for the Western Hemisphere, most of the world came out of the war poor. Two years after V-E Day it is still poor. It needs dollars. It needs credit. It needs capital. It needs trade. It needs technical and managerial skills.

If we in America are to help the rest of the world back to its feet, starting it again on the road to peace and a free economy, we should try to supply those needs within the limits of our capacity.

We must not overtax our own strength. For the first requirement of a stable world is a strong United States. But we must accept leadership in international economic recovery—in our own self-interest.

What can the United States do to help men back to prosperity in a world economy which will allow them freedom and incentive? There are many things. But here are two of the most important:

1. The United States, through Congress, must determine the pattern and the total of the foreign loans or grants it can afford. We must answer three questions. How much will the new program cost? Can we afford it? Have we the technicians and managers to watch the loans, assuring their fruitful use?

2. We must demonstrate that we do not intend to raise our tariff walls to prohibitive heights when our debtors begin to repay us in goods and services, which is the only practical way they can pay us. Otherwise our loans will become losses.

If the United States is to meet even the minimum requirements of world rehabilitation, Congress eventually must authorize more advances than those to Greece and Turkey. The $400 million for those two countries will not do the over-all job of political and economic defense which we have begun. A minimum of $5 billion, if promptly and wisely applied in eight to ten countries, might suffice. BUT this $5 billion will be on top of approximately $16.8 billion which we have spent or earmarked during the past two years for use abroad, including our full share of the World Bank and Fund. We shall do a faster and more effective job if Congress will thus add up the foreseeable total of our international aid, and, even though the total looks imposingly large, commit us to it, with proper collateral safeguards from the debtor nations.

Congress need not try to foretell all contingencies, like last winter's weather in Britain, and it certainly should not create the impression that nations need only ask for billions to receive them. On the other hand, the war should have taught us the miserable consequences of "too little and too late". The President should have learned that he engenders skepticism by going to Congress with parts of a program, as he has done in the British, Grecian and Turkish loans. Within the limits of our capacity, we must make the decision now to see the whole job through—or throw in the sponge.

In the interest of the debtor nations—as well as in our own interest—the loan program should be hard-boiled. Rehabilitation loans must really rehabilitate. They must produce a state of economic health which will permit the World Bank and private capital to take over the task of financing world recovery—as perhaps can be done today in France and the Low Countries.

The loans, therefore, must be within the limits of our technical and managerial ability to implement them. Without technical help, Greece can not use its loan effectively—to rebuild railroads, clear ports, revive agriculture. Without skilled supervisors, Germany can not be made to pay its way. Money alone won't pull China from the brink of economic chaos.

Our lending calls for more than money. It calls for trained personnel to help the recipients utilize the loans effectively—geologists, construction and sanitary engineers, monetary experts, and management and agriculture specialists.

Loans are necessary but they are only a first step. A long-range program requires the opening of the half-closed doors of world trade—our own door, too.

We will have to get used to the idea that, when our debtors pay us, they must pay us largely in goods and services. Refusal to permit such repayments in the twenties helped start the world depression in the thirties—and the loss of our investments. Imports do tend to raise living standards, and a two-way trade program need not require us to slash our present tariff rates.

The complexion of our foreign trade has changed since the war. Our manufacturing capacity has increased and our raw-material self-sufficiency is tending to decline. For example, we probably shall have to continue importing copper and zinc and to increase our pre-war dependence on imported lead. We may soon have to depend heavily on imported oil, and—gradually—on a growing volume of iron ore from abroad. Our normal dependence on imports for commodities like rubber, tin and silk will continue.

Our population has gone up 10 million in the last decade, and we now have a $176 billion national income, making room for more imports.

As a result of every nation's recent attempts to make itself secure and self-sufficient by slamming its trade door, a world-wide series of quotas and restrictions is blocking international trade. Even more, government buying and selling threaten to take commerce out of the hands of private traders, placing it in the uninspired care of bureaucratic negotiators.

Our government has taken the lead in calling the conference of 18 nations, now meeting at Geneva, to open as many trade doors as possible. The American delegates will bargain product by product and country by country—all summer, if necessary—for lower tariffs, fewer quotas and a free flow of private trade. The task is a long one, and the results are as yet uncertain, but, if success is achieved, an immense opportunity for good works and good earnings will lie before American businessmen.

This is no picayunish opportunity. Authoritative estimates put our 1947 exports at $11 billion and our imports at $6 billion. That's substantial. It is greater than the value of all crops grown on our farms ($10½ billion) and exceeds the value of all shipments of industries such as automobiles ($9 billion), textiles ($8 billion) and chemicals ($8 billion).

International trade is vital, not to be shrugged off, not to be kicked around as a football of party politics. Republicans and Democrats agree on a non-partisan foreign political policy. They should agree also on a non-partisan foreign economic policy. The foreign relations of the United States, political or economic, can no longer be log-rolled hither and yon.

A general program for international recovery, outlined here, will bring its full quota of aches and pains. But lack of a program will produce economic and political troubles on a vast scale; timid retreat will invite economic disaster and war.

By an intelligent, bold and resourceful program, we have a chance to win through to a long peace in the kind of world we want. Unless America provides the leadership, there can be no such program. Then Communism merely needs to hang around long enough to pick up the pieces.

Ours is the responsibility and the opportunity.

Wiley Considers Atom Bomb In Plans for Succession Bill

By The Associated Press

Senate Republicans showed signs yesterday of acting on a new Presidential Succession Act which would put the Speaker of the House next in line for the presidency after the Vice President.

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) announced at the same time that he would offer an amendment providing that "the highest ranking military or naval authority on active duty" take over if the President, Vice President and Congress and Cabinet members should be killed or incapacitated in an atomic attack on the Capital.

While few of the bill's sponsors thought it would be necessary to go to any such lengths, there were evidences that Republican leaders were stirring to put through a measure that President Truman requested last year but which the Senate left to die after House passage.

Mr. Truman renewed his request this year with the statement that he believes an elective, rather than an appointive, officer should succeed to the presidency in case of a vacancy. As the law now stands, Secretary of State Marshall is next in line.

In advancing his proposed amendment to the succession bill, Wiley suggested that the military man who would become President in the event other legal successors were incapacitated should hold office only until Congress could act to fill the presidency.

In the same connection, he wrote Budget Director James E. Webb, asking for a report on the advisability of decentralizing the Government from Washington.

As the succession bill stands, the presiding officer of the Senate would follow the House Speaker in the line of succession, with cabinet members listed after that. The measure is on the Senate docket for consideration in 10 days or two weeks.

Md. Youth Held For Questioning In Theft Series

Montgomery County detectives yesterday arrested a 17-year-old Ednor, Md., youth who is wanted in the District for questioning in the larceny of two automobiles and a large quantity of cash, and in Arlington, Va., for entering two stores.

The boy was seated in a Buick he allegedly stole from a parking lot at 5100 Wisconsin ave. nw. on the same night that $1600 was taken from the same place. He also is believed to have broken into a jewelry store and a 10-cent store in Arlington.

Detective Sergts. James M. Anderson and Stanley Harding of the Silver Spring substation made the arrest. They recovered loot from the Arlington stores and $25 in cash and about $25 in property believed stolen in Montgomery County near Ednor.

Police said the youth, a parolee from the Maryland Training School at Loch Raven, Md., had been reported missing from his home for two weeks. He will be turned over to juvenile authorities today.

UAW to Ask Ford For 23½-Cent Raise

Detroit, May 18 (INS).—The United Automobile Workers (CIO) prepared tonight to demand of the Ford Motor Co., a 23½-cent hourly wage increase for approximately 100,000 production employes in the United States.

Ford is reported ready to counter with a demand for elimination of the check-off system covering 80,000 River Rouge plant workers and for a provision requiring 75 per cent of the union's membership to approve strike action prior to a walkout.

MARQUIS W. CHILDS

The book that since its publication in 1936 has come to be regarded as a classic of political writing, whose subtitle has added a phrase to the American vocabulary. This new edition brings the book up to 1947.

"Marquis Childs' book reads like the best political news in years . . . It sounds gloriously like what we used to think of as American; a method of sane compromise and steady progress, each step tested by the sole criterion: Does it work?"

A Successful First Year

NEVER BEFORE has there been published in America a weekly newsmagazine devoted wholly to news of world business and world affairs.

WORLD REPORT—just a year old this week—has established an unprecedented record of growth in the field of news weeklies . . .

NEVER BEFORE has any weekly newsmagazine attained as much as 100,000 circulation in its first year.

NEVER BEFORE has any weekly newsmagazine obtained as much advertising revenue in its first year.

PUBLICATION	CIRCULATION FIRST YEAR	ADVERTISING REVENUE FIRST YEAR
Time	Less than 20,000	Less than $20,000
Newsweek	Less than 30,000	Less than 31,000
The United States News	Less than 8,000	Less than 59,000
WORLD REPORT	More than 100,000*	More than 135,000

ABC Report, average last six months of 1946: 112,000 Circulation. Present circulation is in excess of this figure.*

WORLD REPORT marks the first time, to our knowledge, that any national publication has built its circulation on a 100% voluntary basis. We did not ask our prospective readers for definite subscription orders in advance but simply that they pay only if they liked the first few weekly issues. MORE THAN 70% OF THOSE WHO EXAMINED THE FIRST FEW ISSUES OF WORLD REPORT ON THIS APPROVAL BASIS SENT US THEIR CHECKS FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS OF ONE YEAR OR MORE. We know of no similar record in the whole history of publishing.

We attribute this readership acceptance of WORLD REPORT to the service it renders every week and to the unprecedented interest today in world business and world affairs.

NEVER BEFORE has there been assembled in a single audience so many persons in positions of responsibility in business and the professions who are directly interested in the impact of overseas events on American business and the American economic system.

These business men and influential readers are in the mood, as they examine world affairs, to read the advertising messages of transportation companies, banks with foreign departments and services, insurance companies, the entire automotive and industrial machinery field, construction and engineering concerns—advertising of the widest variety of goods and services needed here and abroad.

These people travel extensively themselves, on vacations and business . . . for pleasure or to examine new opportunities for investment. They are the logical patrons for transportation, hotel and resort facilities everywhere.

While 95% of WORLD REPORT readership resides in the United States, the 5% of its overseas audience represents a choice list of persons influential in business and the governments of the world—a Number One advertising target for prestige and opinion-forming messages in the international field.

But, basically, what makes WORLD REPORT a sound advertising medium is its factual, non-technical, easy-to-read contents covering the political, economic and sociological trends in the post-war world—the dramatic interplay of events which affect all of us.

WORLD REPORT has no editorial page; is identified with no cause or organization, public or private. We believe the best service we can render is to report and explain objectively the facts and background of world affairs and the policies which motivate them. No other publication renders such a comprehensive service.

NOW is the time when American industry and agriculture must look abroad for the extra volume of sales necessary to maintain employment and profit . . .

And NOW, as never before in our nation's history—WORLD BUSINESS IS YOUR BUSINESS.

President Asks Congress To Provide Health Insurance is spread among all our people, no one person is overburdened. More important, if the cost is spread in this manner more persons can see their doctors, and will see them earlier. This goal can be reached only through a national medical insurance program, under which all people who are covered by an insurance fund are entitled to necesary medical, hospital and related services."

Could Pick Own Doctor

The Chief Executive stressed the fact that he advocated selection of doctors of the patient's own choice.

"Under the program which I have proposed," he said, "patients can and will be as free to select their own doctors as they are today. Doctors and hospitals can and will be free to participate or to reject participation.

"And a national health insurance plan can and should provide for administration through State and local agencies, subject only to reasonable national standards."

Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.), minority whip, agreed with other leaders of both parties that the proposed legislation had no chance of consideration this session. Republican leaders have agreed on July 31 as the date for adjournment and there is much work still before Congress.

Text of Truman's Message On Health-Disability Plan

The text of President Truman's message on national health and disability insurance follows:

HEALTHY citizens constitute our greatest national resource. In time of peace, as in time of war, our ultimate strength stems from the vigor of our people. The welfare and security of our Nation demands that the opportunity for good health be made available to all, regardless of residence, race or economic status.

At no time can we afford to lose the productive energies and capacities of millions of our citizens. Nor can we permit our children to grow up without a fair chance of survival and a fair chance for a healthy life. We must not permit our rural families to suffer for lack of physicians, dentists, nurses and hospitals. We must not reserve a chance for good health and a long productive life to the well-to-do alone. A great and free Nation should bring good health care within the reach of all its people.

In my message to the Congress on November 19, 1945, I said that every American should have the right to adequate medical care and to adequate protection from the economic threat of sickness. To provide this care and protection is a challenging task, requiring action on a wide front.

I have previously outlined the long-range health program which I consider necessary to the national welfare and security. I say again that such a program must include:

1. Adequate public health services, including an expanded maternal and child health program.
2. Additional medical research and medical education.
3. More hospitals and more doctors—in all areas of the country where they are needed.
4. Insurance against the costs of medical care.
5. Protection against loss of earnings during illness.

I am pleased to observe that important advances were made by the last Congress toward realization of some of the goals which I set forth in my earlier message. But we must not rest until we have achieved all our objectives. I urge this Congress to enact additional legislation to authorize the program I have outlined, even though the fulfillment of some aspects of it may take time.

OUR public health system—Federal, State and local—provide our greatest and most successful defense against preventable diseases. But in many States, cities and counties in America, limited funds reduce the work of our public health services to a dangerously inadequate level. Public services related to maternal and child health were expended by the Seventy-ninth Congress, through amendments to the Social Security Act. This action was gratifying, but the long-range need for additional health services for children and expectant mothers, and for care of crippled or otherwise physically handicapped children, should be carefully studied by the Congress.

The Nation's medical research programs must in the future be expanded so that we can learn more about the prevention and cure of disease. The Congress has already recognized this by providing for research into the causes of cancer and mental diseases and abnormalities. Further dividends will accure to our Nation—and to our people—if research can point the way toward combating and overcoming such major illnesses as arthritis and rheumatic fever, and diseases of of heart, kidneys and arteries.

We still face a shortage of hospitals, physicians, dentists and nurses. Those we have are unfairly distributed. The shortage of doctors, dentists and nurses can be met only through expanded educational opportunities. The shortage of hospitals will be met in part through the action of the last Congress which provided Federal aid for the construction of hospitals.

IN THE LAST analysis the patient's ability to pay for the services of physicians or dentists, or for hospital care, determines the distribution of doctors and the location of hospitals. Few doctors can be expected to practice today in sparsely settled areas or where prospective patients are unable to pay for their services. Doctors tend to concentrate in communities where hospitals and other facilities are best and where their incomes are most secure. The unequal distribution of doctors and hospitals will plague this Nation until means are found to finance modern medical care for all of our people.

National health insurance is the most effective single way to meet the Nation's health needs. Because adequate treatment of many illnesses is expensive and its cost cannot be anticipated by the individual, many persons are forced to go without needed medical attention. Children do not receive adequate medical and dental care. Symptoms which should come early to the attention of a physician are often ignored until too late. The poor are not the only ones who cannot afford adequate medical care. The truth is that all except the rich may at some time be struck by illness which requires care and services they cannot afford. Countless families who are entirely self-supporting in every other respect cannot meet the expense of serious illness.

Although the individual or even small groups of individuals cannot successfully or economically plan to meet the cost of illness, large groups of people can do so. If the financial risk of illness is spread among all our people, no one person is overburdened. More important, if the cost is spread in the manner more persons can see their doctors, and will see them earlier. This goal can be reached only through a national medical insurance program, under which all people who are covered by an insurance fund are entitled to necessary medical, hospital and related services.

A NATIONAL health insurance program is a logical extension of the present Social Security system which is so firmly entrenched in our American democracy. Of the four basic risks to the security of working people and their families—unemployment, old age, death and sickness—we have provided some insurance protection against three. Protection against the fourth—sickness—is the major missing element in our national social insurance program.

An insurance plan is the American way of accomplishing our objective. It is consistent with our democratic principles. It is the only plan broad enough to meet the needs of all our people. It is—in the long run—far less costly and far more effective than public charity or a medical dole.

Under the program which I have proposed patients can and will be as free to select their own doctors as they are today. Doctors and hospitals can and will be free to participate or to reject participation and a national health insurance plan can and should provide for administration through State and local agencies, subject only to reasonable national standards.

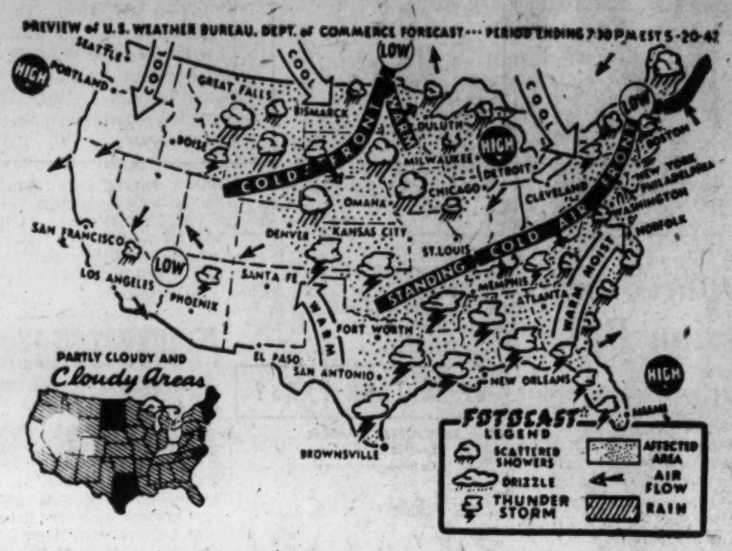
Finally, I should like to repeat to the Congress my earlier recommendation that the people of America be protected against loss of earnings due to illness or disability is already provided by two States and is being considered in others. Comprehensive disability insurance should exist throughout the Nation. It can and should be a part of our social insurance system.

The total health program which I have proposed is crucial to our national welfare. The heart of that program is national health insurance. Until it is a part of our national fabric, we shall be wasting our most precious national resource and shall be perpetuating unnecessary misery and human suffering.

I urge the Congress to give immediate attention to the development and enactment of national health and disability insurance programs.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

National Weather Summary



24-HOUR FORECAST: The Weatherman looked at his charts and air flow arrows and said, "Showers and thunderstorms will occur over most of the United States Tuesday. Much of this stormy weather will occur as warm air from the Gulf of Mexico becomes unstable on its inland journey." (See warm, moist arrows on the FOTOCAST.)

Dull, cloudy skies will blanket New England, the Dakotas, eastern Texas and the coastal section of North Carolina. By way of contract, it will be clear and sunny in western Colorado, Nevada and northern California. (The inset map shows cloudiness which will occur Tuesday.)

Showers will extend from North Carolina to Maine, also from the upper Lakes to Montana. Thunderstorms are foreseen for the South Atlantic and Gulf States, the Central Plains, the central Rockies, southern California and Arizona. (See the affected areas.)

Cooler weather is predicted for New York, western Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky. Cool air from central Canada will invade this section as it moves around the high pressure cell centered over Wisconsin. Cooler temperatures are also the outlook for the Northern Plains and the Pacific Coastal States. (See cool air mass arrows on FOTOCAST.)

Maximum temperatures will range from 95 at Las Vegas to 60 in North Dakota Tuesday afternoon. Forecast maximum temperature readings include Atlanta 87, Washington and Fort Worth 86, Nashville 85, Philadelphia 82, New York and Kansas City 76, St. Louis 74, Chicago, Detroit and Pittsburgh 72, Albany 70, Milwaukee 68, Cleveland and Buffalo 62 degrees.

Indian Unromantic, Philologist Says

Chicago (U.P.).—The Indian words we have absorbed into the American language aren't as romantic as we have been led to believe, according to a language expert.

He is Mitford M. Mathews, editor of the University of Chicago's new dictionary project on Americanisms.

"Chicago is thought by some," he said, "to mean the place of the big skunk.

"And Alabama is really nothing more than to trim weeds.

"We are justified in regarding the Indian as a prosaic fellow. If he had much romantic imagination, it is not revealed in many of his place-names."

English Baron Descendants' Society Meets

"And still when Mob or Monarch lays Too rude a hand on English ways,
The whisper wakes, the shudder plays,
Across the reeds at Runnymede."
—Kipling

—Kipling

Two hundred American ladies of the bluest blood and noblest lineage met in Washington yesterday "to perpetutate the memory of the historic 15th day of June, A. D., 1215."

They are members of the National Society of the Daughters of the Barons of Runnemede.

They are all lineal descendants of the doughty English barons who 732 years ago made King John sign the Magna Carta—celebrated symbol of English, and later American, liberties.

Recall Baron Forbears

Meeting at the Hotel Statler, the "daughters" recalled how their baron forbears had met with a tyrant king.

They called to mind how noblemen and ruler encamped apart, like open enemies, on the reed-covered meadows of Runnemede, how debate between emissaries ensued and then the king was forced to sign on the dotted line.

King John repudiated the document on grounds he had been forced to sign. But the Great Charter long outlived him, becoming a venerated symbol through the centuries and serving as a herald of America's own Declaration of Independence.

Establishment of the charter marked transition from an age of feudal rights to an era of written law, of statutes and of parliaments.

That was the slice of history the daughters of the barons commemorated yesterday.

Donate $250 to England

And as a helping hand to the land from which they, the Magna Carta and democracy came, members voted to send $250 for food to aunger-humbled England.

Presiding at the society's sessions was Mrs. Robert J. Johnston, 82, of Humboldt, Iowa—vividly typical of the group.

She traces her family to 16 of the barons to King John and many other English kings, Edwards and Henrys.

Mrs. Johnston was one of five who founded the society in Washington April 21, 1921. While distinct from the D. A. R., it holds annual meetings at the same time, as so many are members of both.

Membership totals 675 proven barons' descendants. An elite committee includes those whose forbears were Knights of the Bath as Knights or Ladies of the Garter.

Six new members were elected yesterday from this area—after close scrutiny of credentials.

Mrs. William G. Kenyon, 2755 Glebe st., Arlington, Va.; Mrs. Kate C. Porter, Miss Annie Coons and Miss Altha Coons, all of 105½ Woodbine st., Chevy Chase; Mrs. John R. Clark, White Oak, Silver Spring, Md., and Mrs. Hiram E. Johnson, 921 Highland dr., Silver Spring, Md.

Mice Eat Wooden Legs While Man Sleeps

Nandaly, Australia (U.P.).—When they ate his wooden leg, David Strachan felt the plague of mice was getting out of hand.

More than 4000 square miles of the Mallee, southeastern Australia's wheat section, has been overrun by the mice. Thousands of dollars worth of wheat and other produce has been destroyed.

"I take my leg off every night and prop it on a chair by my bedside," Strachan said. "Each morning for a week I saw marks where mice had been nibbling at it, but didn't take much notice. But they ate so much around the ankle one night that I wasn't game to put the leg on in the morning."

Having eaten wallpaper, lampshades, clothing and letters about to be posted, the mice turned to cannibalism, considered a sign that the plague was lessening. Farmers recalled two similar mouse plagues in the past 60 years.

Truman Congratulates Jewish Daily Forward

New York, May 19 (INS).—Alexander Kahn, general manager of the Jewish Daily Forward, today made public a letter of congratulation from President Truman on the fifteenth anniversary of the paper next Sunday.

The President's letter was addressed to Abraham Cahan, editor-in-chief, who, at 87, is one of the oldest editors in the United States. He will be a guest of honor at a celebration in Madison Square Garden May 25.

Rob Communists of Their Rights? —Then Yours Go Out the Window, Too

Mr. Congressman:

We are writing you to convey our opposition to the enactment of any exceptional and punitive measures directed against the Communist party.

We consider the Rankin bill and all similar legislation a threat to the civil liberties of the entire American people almost without parallel in our history. It is a flagrant violation of the rights guaranteed all citizens under the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, and especially reserved to all minority parties and groups.

These guarantees are precious to us for the same sound reasons that made them the foundation of American democracy. Once our government is permitted the means of suppressing one minority party, even if that party is opposed by most Americans, the door is open to the suppression of any and all other minority parties. Moreover the enactment of such legislation would inevitably lead to the censorship of all publications, the policing of all organization programs and subjecting everyone's mail to search and scrutiny.

Legislation such as that proposed by Congressmen Rankin, Sheppard, Hartley, Parnell Thomas and McDonough follows the Hitler pattern. Outlawing the Communist party is the first fatal mile down the road to fascism; it is the inevitable prelude to the destruction of a free labor movement, academic freedom in the nation's schools and colleges, freedom of political and religious belief, and of all progressive organizations and movements.

No true American can ignore the lessons learned from fascist rule in Hitler Germany, and paid for by the American people in blood and suffering.

The Communist party is a legal American political party. We see nothing in its program, record or activities, either in war or peace, to justify the enactment of the repressive legislation now being urged upon the Congress in an atmosphere of an organized hysteria.

We therefore urge you to defend our democratic American way of life by rejecting the Rankin Bill and all legislation which curtails the democratic rights of Communists, or which violates or limits the constitutional right of the Communist party to function as a legal political party as it has in the past.

Respectfully,

Merger Double Talk

Any resemblance between the bill introduced by Senator Edward V. Robertson and the honest-to-goodness armed forces unification that the country needs is, as the saying goes, purely coincidental. Although the bill formally acknowledges the unchallengeable fact that modern war is "total in character," it is painfully obvious that the lesson has not been learned. The thing that the Robertson triplification bill proposes as "the most effective and economical structure which could be erected" can more accurately be described as an essay in disintegration. It is as if Senator Robertson had dumped all the dissident arguments he could collect into the pot in order to brew up the most cumbersome and unmanageable jumble possible.

What is Mr. Robertson's solution for the lack of unity from which our defense has hitherto suffered? Simply to make three completely autonomous components of the Army, Navy and Air Forces, with a verbal link miscalled a coordinator. Mr. Robertson is distrustful of the unifying role given to a Secretary of National Defense as envisioned in the original merger bill. Consequently, he would appoint a powerless Coordinator of National Defense who in effect would be reduced to the position of kibitzer. Nor is this all to the wondrous Robertson concept of military organization for modern warfare. Under his bill each of the defense establishments would consist of "a balanced force of land, air and sea components" adjudged necessary for its functions. In other words, the Army would have its Navy and Air Force, the Navy would have its Army, and so on.

To dignify this sort of botch under the name of integration is sheer casuistry. The Robertson formula, it seems to us, is akin to trying to make a horse run faster by dividing him into three pieces and then tying the jockey to the starting post. It is preposterous, furthermore, to think that such a scheme would promote economy. Economy should not be the primary consideration in the merger, but, if it were, nothing short of wizardry would be required to save money on the Robertson plan. Instead of furthering economy, the measure appears almost deliberately designed to contribute to waste of both effort and money. In our opinion, neither reform nor economy is in the thoughts of the Senator, only a method of backing the defenders of bell-bottomed tradition (exemplified by General Vandegrift and one or two stalwarts of Navy aviation) by providing a smokescreen for them.

We have already had too much of such delay—delay that is relegating future defense plans to a state of paralysis. Opponents of the merger have had adequate time to register their objections. Top heads of the Army and Navy have supported it. This support has been buttressed by testimony of the civilian Secretaries of War and the Navy by the eloquent letter of former Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson. Therefore, we hope that the Senate Armed Services Committee will make short shrift of the Robertson bill and will get on with the fundamental business at hand, which is to report out the unification bill for prompt action. If Mr. Robertson wishes to parade his lack of comprehension of the vital issue before Congress, that is his privilege. But his blissful refusal to look at the military facts of life of the last decade should not be permitted to foist the same blunder upon Congress.

Pakistan

It looks as if the partition of India between Hindustan and Pakistan is being taken for granted as the only way of escape from a religious civil war in independent India. Pakistan, meaning the Holy Land, is the name given to the separate Moslem state which Mohammed Ali Jinnah and his followers desire to create. This proposal would have the effect of dividing what until recently was British India into two hostile empires. It was at first bitterly opposed by the Hindus' Congress Party. Later, however, the Hindu leader, Gandhi, agreed to the creation of a Moslem state in certain areas of Northeastern and Northwestern India in which Moslems predominate, provided that this settlement had the approval of the majority of the populations concerned, as indicated by plebiscite. But Jinnah insists that Pakistan must include the whole of six important provinces in Northern India, including Bengal and the City of Calcutta.

The weakness of Gandhi's conception of Pakistan is that it apparently takes no account of economic necessities. The weakness of Jinnah's conception is that, besides depriving Hindustan of its largest city, it would also include many areas, such as Western Bengal and the Eastern Punjab where Hindus are in the great majority. Thus the proposed partition of India could accomplish nothing in the way of religious unity and peace unless it is accompanied by transfers of populations on a scale not even yet attempted in modern times. Experience has shown that wholesale transfers of population, inevitably involving great physical and spiritual suffering by those directly concerned, can be carried out successfuly only by ruthless totalitarian governments.

To perceive the impracticability of the Pakistan proposal we need but compare it to the very similar proposal sometimes advanced in the United States as the solution to the racial problem. Its proponents would apply the southern principle of segregation on a continental scale; they envisage the creation of a state or territory to be populated, governed and administrated wholly by Negroes. The realization of such a plan would, of course, require the evacuation of the designated area by all white inhabitants. This would necessitate measures very similar to those employed in evacuating Japanese-Americans from the West Coast. It would also require the forcible transfer of millions of Negroes from their homes in all parts of the United States into the designated area. Only under an absolute dictatorship, supported by an enormous military or police, could such a thing be undertaken.

We have also rather fresh in our memories the disastrous fallacies of the Versailles peacemakers in rearranging the map of Europe according to ethnic and religious rather than economic considerations. The answer, if there is an answer, to such problems as the religious conflict in India would appear to lie in a strengthening of local autonomies rather than in arbitrary solutions which take little or no account of individual equities; but such an answer, alas, is contrary to the whole trend of modern politics

Geneva Crisis

An example of the conflict between domestic and foreign policies which has had widespread repercussions is the pending bill providing for the establishment of an import fee on foreign wool. The fee—or, to give it its honest name, an extra tariff duty—may be as much as 50 per cent of value. It may be imposed at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture whenever the Secretary finds that wool is being imported "under such conditions or in such quantities as to render or tend to render ineffective or materially interfere with" the price-support program for domestic wool. The support price has been high enough not only to boost production but also to enable foreign wool to displace domestic wool in part of the American market. The result is that the warehouses of the Commodity Credit Corporation are bulging with unsold American wool. But this is not the only element in what we have hitherto called the dilemma over wool. There is the impact of the proposed extra duty on the reciprocal trade agreement program which is now being pursued at the international conference in Geneva.

We have already said that this superprotection for wool emphasizes "the need for a reexamination of our price-support system in the light of its effects upon our domestic economy and our foreign relations." But there is the immediate problem to consider. It is plain that this import fee device is the opening wedge of a new kind of special-interest legislation. The way would be open for one commodity after another to be equally favored, and increased prices would be the means for paying for the program. At least an opportunity should have been given through hearings for all the pros and cons of such a revolutionary bounty to be debated.

Actually this is what Secretary Anderson first proposed. On February 4 of this year he wrote to Speaker Martin about his wool dilemma. To be sure, he proposed the device of an import fee, but at the same time he reminded the Speaker of possible conflict between the bonus and the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act. Accordingly, Secretary Anderson's bill contained the provision that "no proclamation under this section shall be enforced in contravention of any treaty or other international agreement to which the United States is or hereafter becomes a party." Well, there is plenty of evidence of conflict. At the present time the United States is committed by agreements with Argentina and Uruguay not to increase the duties on raw wool beyond the agreed-upon schedules. We are similarly bound in respect of duties on yarn and woolen manufactures by agreements with France, the United Kingdom, Belgium, among others. And all of them include the most favored nation clause; i. e., they are applicable to all countries trading with us. But the House Agriculture Committee took no notice either of Secretary Anderson's warning or of these agreements. It reported out (with the Senate Committee's express approval) a bill without Secretary Anderson's saving clause.

The result was to put in a turmoil the international conference on tariffs and commercial policy at present going on in Geneva. Vigorous attacks on our good faith have been launched by the delegates. Even Representative Hope, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, as we pointed out on April 28, had admitted that such a criticism would be justified. In particular Australia has led the agitation. That country has been earning dollars to buy from us in this dollar-poor world mainly out of wool exports to America. It is little short of tragic to see the turn that the Geneva proceedings are taking, for the purpose of the conference is to prepare the way for the establishment of an international trade organization, which would be a cornerstone in the functional cooperation we are seeking to promote among the nations. Evidently Undersecretary Clayton is back in Washington in order to remind Congress of the way that our reputation as a treaty-observer is imperiled. It is unthinkable that his reminders will be disregarded.

In this matter much more is at stake than was apparent when the House committee took action. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, and, as we say, we can foresee one special interest after another lining up for its newfangled ration of import fee gravy. The consumer already has been aroused over this prospective raid on his pocketbook. More significant at the moment is the evidence that no international economic order can be built when price support schemes require further support at the customs house. Subsidies are less noxious, and only then if they are so graduated as to enable, say, the wool growers who do not wish to compete with foreign wool to change over to other industries.

Left-Right

Representative Thomas' Committee on Un-American Activities is in Hollywood investigating familiar charges that Communists and fellow travelers have pretty well captured the movie industry and are subtly exploiting it in the interest of the class struggle and Soviet foreign policy. We think it better to wait until the investigation has been completed before attempting to estimate the degree of truth in these charges, though we have some reason to suspect they are not entirely without substance. Meanwhile there is the case of Mr. Robert Taylor, who, it seems, is personally no follower of the gospel according to Marx and Lenin. Mr. Taylor complained to the committee that, against his desire and his private political conviction, he had been obliged to take the leading role in a picture called Song of Russia, and to read lines, written by somebody else, which sounded to him suspiciously like party propaganda. In doing so, he said, he yielded to pressures put upon him from various quarters, including some by Mr. Lowell Mellett, then associated with the Office of War Information, who, it is said, was influential enough to delay action on Mr. Taylor's application for active service in the Navy until the picture had been completed.

Presumably, too, Mr. Taylor was under contract to make the picture. This raises a curious and interesting question of theatrical ethics, namely, whether an actor is justified in exploiting his personality in a way which he believes will make a harmful impression on his audience. From time to time some actor or actress refuses to read some line assigned by the playwright on the ground of its indecency or vulgarity. An extreme example perhaps was that of the late Mrs. Pat Campbell, the original Liza Doolittle of Pygmalion, who balked at the word "bloody," and only after weeks of coaxing and persuasion by Shaw would she consent to utter it. But, as far as we know, no actor has ever resigned his part merely because it misrepresented his philosophy.

Many an actor who strongly disapproved of murder would jump at a chance to play Richard III, though this play, to be sure, with all its violence could scarcely be considered propaganda for evil. Nevertheless, there is a tendency on the part of unsophisticated audiences to identify the part and the actor, and this is perhaps much more the case among movie audiences than those of the legitimate theater. Possibly more than one of Mr. Taylor's admirers may have said to themselves, "If a brave and handsome fellow like Robert Taylor has communistic ideas, they must be good ideas." Suppose, then, that Mr. Taylor had bluntly refused to act in Song of Russia. How would the matter be regarded by the courts when he was sued for breach of contract?

Another thing that interested us was the perplexity of Mr. Adolphe Menjou. "What I can't understand," Mr. Menjou said to the committee, "is why so many millionaires are so strong for communism." That is to say Mr. Menjou couldn't understand why rich men, habituated to a kind of sybaritic living, should be sympathetic to a party which, if it came to power, would certainly remove their luxuries, confiscate their wealth and might even imprison or execute them. Here, it seems to us, Mr. Menjou plainly betrayed his French origin. Mr. Menjou is an example of that Cartesian intellect, which looks for a logic in such matters, and even when unable to find it, nevertheless assumes it to be there. But we feel sure that any of the high-priced psychoanalysts, who are said to be almost as numerous in Hollywood as Reds, could have explained the suicidal yearnings of these millionaires to him as another variant of the Freudian death wish.

MY NEIGHBOR'S GARDEN

Here the green grapes hang heavy on arbor vines
And fruit grows mellow in late summer heat.
Remember Poland, Holland, France . . . oh, all of Europe!
Think now of China when the mail plane points
Into the fringe of cloud across the sun.
My neighbor held a pear cupped in her hand,
"When do these ripen in America?" she asked
As if in excuse for not yet knowing the seasons,
Or else because I found her idle in daylight.
"When will the grapes be ready? And those small plums?"
Her eyes searched out the borders of white phlox,
Roses, and mignonette, and herbs that took her thoughts
Home to an older garden in another country.
She turned from me, seeing a rubythroat
Hover above the blue horn of a morning-glory.
Her eyes were somber when she raised them higher
To watch the evening mail plane from New York.
"Ah! But poor starving Europe . . ." that was all she said.
I heard the boots of armies tramping the summer wheat,
Smelled crushed fruit rotting in those ageless orchards.
I saw a woman cover up her eyes, crouched in a doorway,
In a burning village where Terror was the other name for War.

President Aleman

On my return to Mexico, I wish to express to you my sincere appreciation for the friendly attention given my country in the columns of your newspaper on the occasion of my trip to the United States of America, corresponding to the visit made to this Capital on March of this year, by His Excellency, President Harry S. Truman.

It is really significant and comforting to those who believe in the Inter-American Good Neighbor Policy to note how the organs of the press—which express the democratic goodwill of our Republics—cooperate with intelligence and enthusiasm for better understanding and closer cordiality of the governments and peoples of this hemisphere.

I am very pleased that the Mexican press has also taken advantage of this opportunity to bring to the attention of their readers the esteem and affection that inspire the relations between Mexico and the United States. I reiterate to you my gratitude.

Arlington School Board

Balloting in Arlington County on the May 27 bond issues and the method of selecting the school board will decide an issue far more fundamental in its importance than appears on the surface. It will decide whether the community is to proceed in a sane, economically sound manner or join the parade of more and more spending regardless of the cost to ourselves and future generations.

Leading proponents of a change in the method of selecting the school board are the same people who, all during the war, made constant demands upon that body of public servants, who were struggling with enormous problems, to spend, spend, spend! Regardless of the shortage of qualified teachers and the impossibility of securing building materials, these people demanded more music, more art, more instruction in "social adjustment," more time in school for play, more facilities in schools for feeding the children; schools for 5-year-olds, more time in school for 6 and 7-year-olds, and a multitude of things to relieve parents of their own responsibilities. Now they tell us we must get rid of our school board and give a new and untried board the money to spend as they see fit.

These people admit that we have excellent teachers, but insist that the system is terrible. What is wrong with a system that can get and keep such teachers, keep schools going with more than doubling of population in two or three years, give every child the opportunity to obtain much more than during a period when school systems all over the country are crying for teachers of any kind to keep classrooms open?

Have we grown so used to spending money that we do not have, for things we can well do without, that we must be rid of sane, honest people who feel a responsibility to use wisely the public's money for the greatest good of all our children? Must we go on teaching our children, by example, that the State is wholly responsible for their well being without effort on their own part? It is high time for parents to realize that money cannot buy all things fundamental in a child's educaton, that no school system can take the place of character building in the home if life in our country is to continue to be based on the famliy and the rights and dignity of the individual.

The citizens of Arlington County have the opportunity to retain a sane and responsible course in their affairs. I sincerely trust they will consider well and choose wisely.

Waterway Development

Publishing the splendid letter from Mr. Monroe Sweetland, editor of the Molalla Pioneer, Molalla, Oreg., in your May 2 issue was a genuine public service.

Most Americans know little or nothing about the value of irrigation, flood control and waterway projects. The waterways of America, the vast areas of fertile land in the West, are among the Nation's greatest natural assets.

We shall not presume to speak about irrigation and flood control. We should, however, like to say that the continuing growth of the Nation is largely dependent upon waterway development, as past growth has been. In addition to their intrinsic value, the improvements provide constructive employment. They also stimulate business directly in improvement areas and indirectly throughout the country. They are productive, permanent assets. All in all, no other Federal expenditure of like amount is more beneficial to the Nation or to the people. Certainly, no other Federal expenditure is subject to closer scrutiny.

Deepening and widening waterways rarely make any difference in their appearance. Thus it is, around and throughout the Nation. Most people know little or nothing of what is being done. Consequently, they have no conception of what such improvements mean to the Nation's commerce and defense. It follows that, the all-embracing support which their essential worth entitles them to is lacking. Picture America without its deep harbors and navigable channels!

We agree wholeheartedly with Mr. Sweetland in what he says about calling it economy to greatly curtail expenditures for continuing development of our natural resources, unrivaled in all the world. Such development is as much a part of our everyday economy as is the manufacture of steel, railroad cars, automobiles; or as the building of highways, factories and homes. America is not yet complete, and it is not economy to stunt or retard its growth.

Retarding the advance and might of America is dangerous economy.

Violation of Privacy

I cannot understand how you can publish the picture of a dead person who never attempted to play a part in public life (see edition of May 15). Can we not enjoy some privacy in death?

Your publication of such a picture, along with similar efforts of other newspapers, violates the fundamental right of an American, namely, to be left alone.

DP Barriers

The plight of the displaced persons in Europe is a reproach to all the nations that refuse to receive these victims of Hitler's aggression. It alarms me to think that this Nation has brought over many German scientists, who actually aided the German war machine, without lifting a hand to help the teachers, ministers, professional people, farmers and laborers who had the courage of their convictions and as a result must now live in disgraceful conditions with no homes, no possessions, and worst of all, no constructive work to do.

If a law is necessary to authorize the use of unfilled immigration quotas of past years, such a law would surely be so simple for Congress to pass, and the benefits to the refugees, and to this country also, would be so disproportionately large as compared to the trouble of passing the law, that it is hard to see why this is not done immediately. Therefore it behooves those of us who wish to help these displaced persons, to bring pressure to bear on Congress.

If there were an organization working toward this end, it would probably be more effective than individual efforts, but I have not yet heard of any such organization. But individual efforts are not to be discounted, for enough of them may bring about the lowering of immigration barriers in the United States, and if we take the lead, as we certainly should, other nations will follow suit. Not only will thousands of lives be saved, but the world will be richer for the contributions these people can make if given the opportunity.

Voice of America

The "Voice of America" program, beamed by the State Department to countries abroad, has come in for much criticism, without more than a few Americans knowing what the broadcasts are really like, that I would like to make a proposal.

The proposal is this: Why doesn't the State Department institute the practice of broadcasting sample programs at fairly frequent intervals to the folks right here at home This would give us all, Congressmen included, a chance to know just what is going on. If the programs are good they are pretty sure to be supported. If they are not good, we don't want them.

Also, I would like to propose that programs being broadcast from other countries vilifying the United States be rebroadcast in the United States so that we all may know at first hand just what is being said about us. So far we have only heard statements to the effect that such and such is being said.

Sacred Cow

I refer to the letter of May 15 by U. Grant-Smith regarding the Sacred Cow. Obviously, the writer knows little of India. Because all life is sacred, nothing is sacred in India. The sacred cows, for they are infinite, are not Brahma. They are not even equivalent to the goddess of evil, Kali. There is no reason for our pilots not to name their planes the Sacred Monkey or the Sacred Cobra. To the Brahmin even the germs we breathe are sacred.

However, it is sweet to find an American so supersensitive. He would have remembered the pedestal that Christ gave to woman, had he seen a Hindu hurrying across F st. the other afternoon, his little wife taking her life in her hands as she humbly followed her master through traffic. I remembered the Sacred Cow.

Calling Washington

Dewey On Labor

ALBANY, N. Y.—The turmoil in Washington over the omnibus labor bill has been felt even here in tranquil Albany. The effort to push Gov. Thomas E. Dewey into declaring his views on Federal labor legislation has increased as the controversy over the measure itself has increased.

Part of that effort is to try to needle Dewey into saying whether he does or does not agree with the stand taken by Republican Senator Irving M. Ives of New York. Ives has opposed, and with considerable success, the so-called strengthening amendments urged in the Senate by Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

Thereby he has stirred the ire of right-wing Republicans in the State. They refer to him in indignant letters and angry conversation as "that New Deal Republican."

Now it is a fact that Dewey, after considerable jockeying, approved Ives for the senatorial nomination last fall. Ives was elected in the Dewey landslide. Is he, therefore, Dewey's man and dos he speak for Dewey on labor legislation?

When you look into Ives' background, you see at once that this question is beside the point. Ives has been through the fire of political battle and he has emerged with a reputation for high integrity and great know-how in Government. To several visitors, Dewey has expressed the belief that Ives is the best qualified man to enter the Senate of the United States in many years.

IVES WAS in politics before Dewey was heard of. He was for many years majority leader of the upper house of the State Legislature. He directed several bipartisan investigations into the ills of our time.

One of them was on the whole problem of labor and industry. One of the things that came out of that thorough, patient investigation was the School of Industrial Relations at Cornell University, of which Ives became the first head. His stand on the omnibus labor bill was based on his knowledge and his convictions.

Dewey describes himself today as to the right of Ives, ideologically speaking. Dewey is for a labor bill that can be passed, if necessary, over President Truman's veto. Here, of course, he would seem to coincide with Ives' position, since Ives has argued repeatedly that to include a ban on industry-wide bargaining or other "tough" provisions would kill the chances for any legislation.

Another question is: Did Dewey warn Taft against putting Ives on the Senate Labor Committee? That report has frequently been printed. What Dewey actually said to Taft on this subject went more or less like this:

"If you want to have your own way in the committee you had better not appoint Ives. He is a new Senator and there are other committees he is interested in. On the other hand, if he wants the assignment on Labor, then I am for him."

At any rate, that is the version accepted by the "Dewey team." Ives did get the assignment and he has played such an important part in shaping the labor bill that he has distinguished himself far more than most freshman Senators ever do.

WHEN HE was campaigning for the Presidency in 1944, Dewey made a labor speech at Seattle, Wash. In that speech he said:

"The National Labor Relations Act is a good and necessary law. It acknowledges the trend of our times and will continue to be the law of the land. But that law has been working badly. It has failed to secure the industrial harmony we sought. It has failed because under the present administration, the whims of bureaucrats take the place of Government by law."

Dewey would not say that today. He has moved quite a long way from such free-wheeling indorsement of the Wagner Act. His labor speech was one of a series that led Democrats to apply a "me, too," tag to the Republican nominee.

With an overwhelmingly Republican Legislature, Dewey put through at the last session a bill forbidding civil servants to strike under penalty of being fired. That brought angry denunciations from labor union chieftans.

How far Dewey would go in Federal labor legislation, no one is likely to know before 1948. But talk of his repudiating Ives is a little foolish. There are those on the Dewey team acutely aware that, come '48, Ives will be a political ace in the hole should Dewey happen once again to be the Republican nominee.

Arts Committee

We are glad to note in Mr. Whyte's letter of May 14 that the Washington Arts Council has indicated that interested groups are invited to join it. The Washington Arts Committee, which is committed to a program of organizing a community arts center, the policies of which will be administered democratically by Washington's art, music, drama, dance, radio and writing groups, is glad to join or cooperate with the council or any other group that is interested in this objective.

The Washington Arts Committee will hold a rally at the National Museum Auditorium, 10th and Constitution ave. nw., on Wednesday evening, May 28, in which all groups and interested individuals are invited to participate. Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas will be the principal speaker.

David Campbell, drama; Batya Heller, dance; Sol Panitz, radio; Doris Plenn, writing; J. G. Fraim, lay committee; Jack Berkman, visual arts; Sophocles Papas, music.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Since The Fulton Speech

NEARLY A year ago, at the end of June, the Prime Minister of South Africa, Field Marshal Smuts, delivered an address at the Pilgrim's dinner in London. Little attention was paid to it at the time, but a short news report to the New York Times said that he had pictured "the world of tomorrow as divided into two great power groups with the British group between them," and that he had said that it was the task of the British Empire to interpret "the one to the other, thus preventing war."

Lippmann

The significance of that statement was not appreciated either by the State Department or by the American public, though a statement of that sort would not have been made idly by an empire statesman at a Pilgrim's dinner.

PRIME MINISTER SMUTS was speaking only a few months after Mr. Churchill's speech at Fulton, and shortly after Secretary Byrnes had been converted to the thesis of the Fulton speech, and had begun to act on the idea of an Anglo-American front throughout the world against the Soviet Union. The policy of the Smuts speech was so radically different from that of the Fulton speech that few Americans at the time were willing to believe that it was more than a vagrant expression of a personal opinion.

Most of those who professed to speak with knowledge and authority about British affairs have kept on insisting that only a few back benchers of the left and some "crypto-Communists" and fellow travelers take the view Smuts stated: that the interest of Britain is not to align itself with the United States against the Soviet Union but to take an independent line.

So they felt sure that the so-called Truman Doctrine, which descends directly from the Fulton speech, would be received with enthusiasm in Great Britain. It should have been if the fashionable and official estimate of Britain was correct. But in fact the Truman Doctrine has had a generally unfavorable reception in Britain, as it has almost everywhere else in Europe, though for reasons of expidency rather than of conviction, the expression of the unfavorable opinion has been restrained, and indirect, except, of course, on the far left.

NOW, HOWEVER, events are beginning to show that the Smuts speech of last June, rather than the Fulton speech and the Truman Doctrine, indicate the direction in which British policy is evolving. There has been the royal visit to South Africa, where Smuts is Prime Minister. There is the recession of Britain from Greece, Turkey, Egypt and Palestine. There is the economic agreement with Poland, and the British negotiations with the Soviet Union. There is Mr. Churchill's speech last week wherein, as he advocated a united Europe, he spoke of "we Europeans," and asked the dominions and the United States to give their blessing to Britain's new role, which is "to play her full part as a member of the European family."

These are portents which we shall ignore, or explain away, only if we are determined not to know what is going on in the world. The royal family did not go to South Africa in order to escape the cold weather in England but to mark and to promote the change in the empire and the revolution in imperial strategy. In South Africa, which is an immensely rich and undeveloped land, Britain may find the means of becoming, despite the liquidation of the Indian and Near Eastern empires, an independent great power in the world. The British people have been great too long to accept passively the role which was assigned to them in the Fulton speech, and is implicit in the Truman Doctrine, that of the little brother in a "fraternal association" with us.

AS THEW withdraw from the old imperial positions, they are looking for new ones. They are withdrawing from Asia into Africa as regards their overseas empire. They are moving forward into Europe as regards the British Isles. They are drawing closer to France. They are not allowing the "iron curtain" to shut them, as we have allowed it to shut us, out of Poland. They will not abandon, and they will probably strengthen and renew, their alliance with the Soviet Union.

None of this means, I need hardly say, that they are divorcing themselves from the United States. But it does mean that they are not accepting the ideological pattern and the political consequences, which Mr. Churchill laid down at Fulton and President Truman adopted a year later. I think it is fair to suppose that they regard the "Truman Doctrine" as a wrong way to do a right thing, and in its reckless overtones an aberration, due to inexperience, which this country, as it reflect upon it, will replace by a much more contructive policy based on the actualities of the world.

I HAVE NO doubt myself that this is what is going to happen, as we re-examine and re-assess our position, the general commitments which have been made for us so rhetorically, and the enormous responsibilities and burdens which we shall soon have to meet.

Labor Bill

By Ernest Lindley

Approval Hinges On Moderation

CONGRESS IS within striking distance of a labor bill which can become law either with the President's approval or over his veto.

The President has told some of his closest associates, individually as well as collectively, that his mind is open and will remain open until he has analyzed carefully the bill as it is finally approved by both houses after the report of the conference committee. His statements to this effect have been so firm that they have shaken the confidence of some of his political supporters who earlier counted on a veto.

Lindley

An important turning point was the rejection by the Senate of the amendment to curb industry-wide collective bargaining. The failure of this amendment was a disappointment to some who voted against it as well as a surprise to some who voted for it. Had it been adopted, the final bill would have included a similar provision. Such a provision would have justified a veto in the eyes not only of labor leaders but of some leaders of business and of many middle-of-the-road and progressive voters who favor labor reform legislation.

Chairman Hartley of the House Committee on Labor has already predicted that the provision in the House bill banning Nation-wide bargaining will be discarded in conference. Thus what appeared to be miscarriage in the original plan of Senator Taft may prove to be the stroke which will make labor legislation possible at this session.

THERE ARE other provisions in the House bill and some in the Senate which invite a veto. The conference committee can reduce these to a minimum if it so desires. It cannot produce a bill which will be satisfactory to the leaders of organized labor. But it can devise a bill which, on the whole, will seem reasonable to most other people.

Serious objections can be made to the detail of almost all legislation in this field. The problems involved cannot be solved by legislation alone. The present situation, however, is unsatisfactory to almost everybody except the leaders of organized labor. The general public clearly expects Congress to make an honest effort to check abuses and to correct the balance between organized labor and other groups in our society. It will expect doubts to be resolved in favor of the remedial legislation worked out in Congress rather than against it.

THE PRESIDENT himself proposed remedial legislation last year. During the railroad strike he asked for emergency action so strong that he was criticized by Senator Taft and others. Neither the Senate nor the House bill proposes a solution for the problem of a strike in an essential industry. Further legislation may be needed next year or the year after, both to fill gaps and to correct imperfections if a labor law is enacted at this session.

The President has a choice of three routes. He can veto the bill. He can approve it. Or he can permit it to become law without his signature. Neither of the latter courses would prevent him from stating his objections, or expressing his doubts, about the wisdom or workability of certain features of the bill.

Practical politics do not specify the answer to the President's dilemma. It can be argued that he must throw a sop to the leaders of organized labor or that he will have the support of organized labor anyway in 1948. On the Republican side, there are some who would rather have no labor legislation at this session because they don't want to blunt an issue. Their influence will be exerted on the side of a bill which cannot be carried over a veto.

For those who want remedial legislation the general course to be followed is obvious. The conference report should stay close to the Senate bill and, if possible, iron out some of its more obvious defects. This is the way to avert a veto—or, if there is a veto, to override it.

Human Challenge

The United States And The DP's

IN DISPLACED persons' camps in Germany, Austria and Italy are approximately 900,000 men, women and children who, two years after the end of the war, still await their liberation.

NOVER

For those unfortunates the war goes on. To them VE-Day represents the bitter memory of a terrible deception.

The Allied victory in Europe was followed in a relatively short time by the freeing from German servitude of many millions of Frenchmen, Russians, Belgians, Dutchmen, Norwegians, Poles and others who, during the years of Hitler's domination of Europe, had been made slaves of the Nazi war machine.

With the help of the liberating armies and of UNRRA they were able to return to their countries, their homes, their families, and rebuild the shattered fragments of their lives.

The 900,000 still left in DP camps represent the hard core of what, in the jargon of Military Government, are called the non-repatriables. They are the individuals who have no homes to go to, no country they can call their own.

ABOUT 20 PER CENT of these 900,000 are Jews, the surviving remnant who managed to surmount the tortures of the Gestapo and escape the crematoriums of Himmler's SS. The one burning desire of most of them is to escape from the charnel house of Europe, preferably to Palestine.

Of the remaining 80 per cent, the great majority are Poles and Balts—Lithuanians, Esthonians, Latvians—who, for understandable reasons have resisted every effort to get them to go back to their native lands.

The United States, for the soundest of humanitarian reasons, has supported their refusal to be repatriated. There can be little doubt that repatriation in many cases would mean death or at least imprisonment. These displaced individuals have no sympathy for the governments that now rule over their countries.

UNTIL June 30, the DP's are, in effect, the wards of the armies of occupation and of UNRRA. On that day UNRRA passes out of the picture and is to be replaced by the International Refugee Organization which was set up at the last regular meeting of the United Nations General Assembly.

I. R. O. will not actually come into being and begin to function unless and until its charter has been ratified by 15 nations—16 have already done so—and funds have been appropriated by the members.

This means, in effect, that I. R. O. will remain a paper organization until the United States has agreed to pay its share—$73,500,000—which, incidentally, is just over half the sum we are spending annually for the maintenance and provisioning of the camps in our zones in Germany and Austria.

PURELY on practical grounds of economy, therefore, it is of the utmost importance that Congress act speedily to vote the necessary appropriations. Once it has done that, however, it cannot rest on its oars, comforted in the happy feeling that once again the United States has demonstrated its humanitarian concern with less fortunate individuals.

The problem of the DP's cannot be regarded merely as a problem in maintaining camps in which these former slaves of the Nazis are enabled to keep body and soul together.

All the high professions made by our statesmen and the spokesmen of other United Nations will be meaningless unless the nations of the world join in finding a permanent solution of the DP problem. That permanent solution must be to find new homes for the displaced.

THERE IS a bill now before the House—it was introduced by Representative William G. Stratton, Republican member from Illinois—which shows the way not only for this country but for other countries as well.

Mr. Stratton would authorize the admission into the United States, outside the quota, of 400,000 displaced people over the next four years. Certainly a nation of 140 million can afford to provide a haven for so tiny an addition to America's population.

In a recent letter to Earl G. Harrison, chairman of the Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons, the Most Rev. William T. Mulloy, Bishop of Covington and President of the National Catholic Rural Life Conference, declared that his organization had received pledges from various dioceses and individuals to guarantee jobs and housing to substantial numbers of Catholic displaced persons on farms throughout the United States.

Aid from other religious and civil bodies and from many individuals has also been promised. The program, moreover, has the support of both the A. F. of L. and the CIO.

The enactment of the Stratton bill is the very least we can do to help solve a problem whose existence is a blot on our vaunted civilization. Failure to take constructive action on the DP problem will subject the United States to the charge that our professions of democracy and humanitarianism are the veriest mockery.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Congressional Economy Menaces Reparations

Congressional economy threatens to knock out the only Federal agency collecting reparations from Germany.

The reparations are in the form of secret German technical and scientific knowledge. They were a subject of dispute between State Secretary Marshall and Russian Foreign Minister Molotov at the recent Moscow conference.

The information is being collected by the Office of Technical Service in the Commerce Department. The House refused to give this agency funds to operate beyond June 30.

The agency has 663 employes—476 full time and 187 part time—and today they will all be put on notice that June 30 will be their last day unless the Senate reverses the House. A cable yesterday was sent to the 250 employes near Frankfurt, Germany, where they are collecting, classifying, and microfilming the patents and other valuable information, to stop operations immediately and to liquidate by June 30. The rest of the 663 employes are in this city.

Meantime, it was learned that the Office of the Housing Expeditor is making new plans to relax building restrictions—a move which would knock out jobs of between 1500 and 2000 employes on June 30. Slated tentatively for firing are the bulk of the employes who were transferred to OHE from Civilian Production only a few weeks ago. These employes carry on what remains of the veterans' housing program. But more on housing later, and back to the reparations story.

At the Moscow conference, Molotov said that the technical information collected in Germany by this country was worth 10 billion dollars. He then argued that the U. S. should agree to allow Russia to take economic reparations from Germany.

However, Marshall pointed out that the United States was willing to make the German information available to the Russians, if the Russians, in turn, would share with us the technique and scientific information they had acquired in Germany. The Russians refused.

But it was learned yesterday that the Russians will be given copies of all the reports published by the Commerce office on the German industrial lore. And at a token price.

The German information is published by the Commerce office and offered for sale to the public. Hundreds of reports have been printed and they usually sell for $1 each. More than 340,000 copies have been sold and orders come in from American businesses at a rate of 1000 a day.

The Russian government, through Amtorg, its purchasing agent in this country, has demanded that it be sold several copies of each report. Amtorg deposited a sufficient sum in a local bank to cover the proposed purchase.

But Commerce officials were reluctant to sell the information to the Russian government. They took up the matter with State officials. After months of stalling, State officials are said to have decided that the reports should be sold to Amtorg since the material is being made public and anyone could write in and get it.

Several large U. S. corporations are said to have been willing to pay up to 20 million dollars for exclusive rights to a German process. The department, however, has made public all its information to all businesses at nominal fees.

The German brain-picking project is a cooperative venture and business. U. S. business sent 600 technical people to Germany to help Commerce employes dig out the valuable information for patents, I. G. Farben files, and other sources.

Incidentally, microfilming equipment was recently sent to Germany to take pictures of the documents. Officials say the millions of pages of material could have been microfilmed and the German work closed out by the end of the year.

But the German reparations is only one phase—though the largest—of the Office of Technical Service. This office also:

Carries on the work of the National Inventors' Council which was responsible for several successful war weapons. Charles F. Kettering of General Motors is its chairman. It had been planned for the council to screen inventions for peac time uses;

Supplies technical information to small businesses. This work was started by the old Smaller War Plants Corporation, and it was transferred to the OTS when SWPC was wiped out, and Releases information on wartime research developed by War, Navy, Office of Research and Development and other Federal agencies. Information on all projects is given the OTS which releases it to business when the material is declassified.

OHE: The pressure is on Frank Creedon, the housing boss, to relax Federal building restrictions. A policy meeting of housing officials will be held today and tomorrow to try to arrive at a decision. It will be proposed that the Office of the Housing Expediter raise from 50 million dollars to 75 million dollars a week the amount of non-residential construction to be authorized.

It was pointed out that denials now run around 25 million dollars a week and that the proposed new policy would have the effect of "taking the lid off housing restrictions."

Communism Perils Stressed As DAR Opens Convention

Science Monitor staff writer and Balkans correspondent for many years, told 1000 women at the Defense Rally, "America now is in greater danger than at any other time since the battle of Valley Forge. It stands alone in the struggle against communism. Imperialist Soviet, backed by Communists, has many teachers, editors and leaders of women's organizations supporting and spreading its doctrines not only in the United States but throughout the world."

Reds Would Destroy U. S.

Markham declared the avowed aim of communism is to destroy the United States. He charged that Senator Pepper, Henry Wallace and some editors champion the "false assertion" that governments in the satellite countries represent the people.

Declaring that the Soviet has imposed communism on all the eastern countries except Greece, and is attempting to do the same there, Markham said that the so-called People's Front governments are far from democratic. The least Communist-dominated of any is Czechoslovakia, he added.

Earlier, DAR delegates heard Army and Navy spokesmen and Mrs. Pearl Norton, national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, plead for universal military training and other defense measures to insure this country against future wars.

The preparedness appeals were made by Rear Admiral O. S. Colclough, judge advocate general of the Navy, and Brig. Gen. John M. Devine, commander of the Army's universal training experimental unit at Fort Knox, Ky., who also spoke at the national defense rally preceding last night's formal opening.

Admiral Colclough called upon the delegates to use their "persuasive powers" to influence men to join the Naval Reserve.

Wants Youths "Sold"

General Devine suggested the women could help out universal military training by similar sales work among the 18-year-old boys whom the Army wants to train.

He challenged the contention young men would be deprived of educational opportunities if they went into the armed service at 18. "The average boy does not go to college or even to high school," he averred, "and the Army would offer these youths educational programs and other advantages to develop into better citizens."

Mrs. Norton said it is time for the women to speak out for their country. Pointing out that the auxiliary believes in universal military training, she urged DAR delegates also to support military training so as to keep America safe and at peace.

The DAR president general also came out in support of strong national defense and military training.

Dowling Elected By Class of 1886

The Washington High School Class of 1886 has a new president—Harry W. Dowling, 80, of 3603 14th st. nw.

He was elected Saturday night at the 61st annual reunion of classmates who received their diplomas from President Grover Cleveland at Albaugh's Opera House, which was then at 15th st. and Pennsylvania ave.

Still active, Dowling is a general auctioneer. His firm was founded here by his father, almost a century ago.

Professor L. P. Leggette, head of the George Washington University speech department, will be principal speaker. More than 80 speakers' bureau members are expected to attend, according to Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, chairman.

Electric Light Bulbs House Art Work

Long Beach, Calif. (U.P.).—In the hands of R. E. Searight, a discarded electric light bulb becomes the showcase for the American scene.

A former ship-in-a-bottle craftsman, Searight decided to see what could be done with burned out bulbs. He enlarged his repertoire to include everything from banks to bowling alleys, from battles to weddings.

Size is no handicap to this master craftsman. He can show you a bride and groom in a flashlight bulb no large than the end of his thumb, as well as a complete city block in a 1000-watter. His bowling alley scene is complete with bowlers and spectators, chairs for the onlookers, pins, pin boys and a scoreboard.

May Denies Bribe Charges

in his name had ever been repaid, May said: "I don't know."

May testified at length about his connection with the Cumberland Lumber Co., a Prestonsburg, Ky., firm through which the prosecution has charged May received most of the alleged bribes by way of Garsson financing for May's benefit.

In all the Cumberland transactions, May said:

"I was speaking for Henry Garsson. The idea was to get lumber for crates for gun shells he was producing, as soon as possible."

Cumberland Ownership Questioned

A principal Government witness in relating the May-Garsson relation with Cumberland had been L. W. Fields of Whitesburg, Ky. He said May never mentioned the Garssons as having any ownership in the firm nor spoke of shipping lumber to the Garsson enterprises.

May said he had hired Fields to get Cumberland production going to provide shell crates.

"Frankly I tolerated him because I liked him," May said. "I guess I was doing the owners an injustice all the time I was doing it."

The prosecutor contends Cumberland never sent a "stick of lumber" to Garsson firms but that May sold "substantial" amounts of lumber from the tract to others.

Explosives to Lie 500 Fathoms Deep

Belle Chasse, La. (U.P.).—Buried deeply in concrete vaults here are the grimmest souvenirs of war. The United States Navy says even the vaults are not safe enough for this "volatile backwash of war"—muntions once intended for use against Japan.

So the Navy is moving them to a safer place, some 500 fathoms (3000 feet) below the waves of the Gulf of Mexico, at Area X.

Included in the stores are corroded mines, weather-whipped ammunition, bombs that may have seen too much sun on a Pacific atoll and other explosives that bring out the brilliant red flags when LST 528 makes her trips to the disposal ground.

spending and continuing high levels of National income and production. He said it was logical taxes should be cut at some future date.

Across the Capitol, meanwhile, Senate Finance Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) said he will move today to call up the revised Knutson bill ranging cuts from 30 per cent in the lowest brackets to 10.5 per cent at the top.

Democrats, more solidly united than they have been on any issue this session, planned to allow the bill to come up without protest and then wage a party-line fight to postpone final acion until June 10.

Purpose of the Democratic motion, which may not reach a vote until late this week, is to force the GOP's hand on budget-cutting. By June 10, they contend, Congress should know how much will be shaved from all appropriation bills, and will have a last chance to break the deadlock on the legislative budget.

Hospital Tour Gives Head Man Headache

Charleroi, Pa. (U.P.).—Superintendent James S. Lau took inventory at the Charleroi-Monessen Hospital and found:

Two hundred seven patients in the 180-bed hospital.

Forty-eight mothers and 50 babies.

And two nurses missing.

Back in his office, Lau found this message:

"The waiting list is 17 now. Can you make room for anyone?"

His answer:

"I couldn't even get a bed for myself should I need it. And I believe I do."

U. S. Snythetic Rubber Held Best

Cleveland (U.P.).—American synthetic rubbers are widely different and vastly superior to those utilized by the German, Dr. Harlan L. Trumball told the Petroleum Study Club of Cleveland.

Dr. Trumball said German synthetic rubbers were too tough and lost many of their desirable properties in reheating to soften them for use in the manufacture of tires.

"German synthetic rubber tires had only 20 per cent of the useful life of American synthetics," he said.

Army Makes Thief Pepentant Christian

Davenport, Iowa (U.P.).—Troubled because he stole bread 10 years ago to feed his hungry family, a former Davenport man sent $1 and a letter of apology to his old grocer.

"I committed the thefts," the repenter, now living in the East, wrote, "because my family was poor and we could not afford enough food. Since then I have spent several years in the Army and am no wa true Christian. Please accept this dollar bill for the seven or eight loaves of bread I took from you."

then chaplain of the 129th Field Artillery Regiment in which Mr. Truman, as a captain, commanded a battery. The President always addresses him as "Padre."

The Chief Executive, who has been spending his nights at the Muehlebach Hotel in Kansas City, awoke early this morning as usual. At 6:15 a. m. he started out on a walk with Rear Admiral James H. Foskett, his naval aide. Later, after reading the papers and breakfasting with White House Secretaries Charles G. Ross and Matthew J. Connelly, the President started for Grandview.

He has been carrying on some of his executive duties ever since he flew here Saturday after hearing of his mother's setback. Miss Rose Conway, his personal secretary, reports each day at the Truman bungalow and helps the President with his correspondence.

An office also has been set up in the President's suite in the Muehlebach. Here Secretary Connelly handles telephone calls from Washington and sorts out official documents that have to be signed by Mr. Truman.

Students Too Bright Or Tests Too Easy

Syracuse, N. Y. (U.P.).—Too many students are getting "A's" at the Syracuse University graduate school.

The board of graduate studies reached that conclusion after surveying 2279 grades given out last semester.

Among graduate students alone, the board found almost 42 per cent of the grades were A's, 51 per cent B's, about 6 per cent C's, and only .5 per cent D's and F's.

HOLC Destined To Show Profit, Says Official

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation will be able to liquidate itself and show a profit, Commissioner John H. Fahey of the Federal Home Loan Bank Administration said last night.

Final figures on operations of the agency to January 1 have reduced the corporation's losses on its properties, he said, and HOLC losses should be "entirely eliminated" before this Government lending venture is completed.

"Instead of suffering expected huge losses on its loans to save owners and bail out financial institutions in the depression years, at final liquidation HOLC will be able to return its original capital to the United States Treasury intact, plus some earnings," Fahey said.

Eric Sevareid's
NOT SO WILD A DREAM

The continuing popularity of Sevareid's Not So Wild A Dream is due to the intense personal meaning it has for everyone who reads it. It has become a best seller because it documents the awakening to life—and death—of an entire generation. Oddly enough, that generation includes readers in their thirties, forties, and fifties—people who feel that Sevareid has shown them what the past twenty years have meant in terms of their own ideas, feelings, and decisions, and what they, as individuals, face in the years ahead.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

IN ALL the sarcastic cross-examination of the State Department's art program, it is interesting that no Congressman ever bothered to inquire about the effectiveness of these art exhibits in building friendship abroad.

Actually, had any Congressman inquired, he would have found that in Prague, Czechoslovak Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk personally opened the exhibit with a speech praising American art, while President Benes spent several hours studying the pictures. Apparently they appreciated the State Department's selection, including the fat circus lady, even if the Republican Congressmen from the wide-open spaces of Norfolk, Nebraska or the famous prison-city of Auburn, N. Y., didn't.

In the Western Hemisphere, the art show was equally well received. In Haiti the public streamed to see it. One Cuban art critic said the show demonstrated that the United States was able to contribute to the cultural riches of man as well as to his material riches.

Even before Congress cut his appropriation, Assistant Secretary of State Bill Benton, worried over the scowls of Auburn, New York's Congressman Taber, sacrificed LeRoy Davidson, one of the Nation's outstanding art collectors, who was in charge of the State Department's art project. Now both Congress and the State Department are being bombarded with protests from leading museums, artists and laymen all over the country, many of whom charge that the attack on modern art is identical with similar moves by totalitarian regimes in Italy and Germany before the war.

Note—President Truman, who thinks no art after 1800 is really worth considering, has hung two paintings in the White House executive office lobby referred to by some visitors as "Harry's hideous delight." Truman paid $10,000 of the taxpayers' money for what many considered artistic atrocities. But anyway, they aren't modern, so no Congressman is likely to be critical.

Truman's Birthday Friend

WHEN a group of presidential cronies gathered at the White House to wish their friend a happy sixty-third birthday, former Senate Secretary Leslie Biffle arrived a trifle late.

"Mr. President," Biffle said, "I've got a note here from my secretary, Betty Kraus, wishing you a happy birthday. It's Betty's birthday, too, and she's proud to have been born on the same day."

Truman smiled, said nothing. About five minutes later he excused himself, went into the next room, called Biffle's office, personally thanked Miss Kraus for her thoughtful note, and wished her a happy birthday, too.

Two 'Impartial' Senators

IT LOOKS as if the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is wasting money by hiring lawyers. It seems to have two free lawyers in the persons of Senator Capehart of Indiana, the music master, and Senator Willis Robertson of Virginia, who took the place of Carter Glass.

One a Republican, the other a Democrat, both have been acting as defenders of the B. & O. in Senator Tobey's probe of the railroad's heavy loans from Jesse Jones' old Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Chairman Tobey of the Senate Banking Committee at first was dubious about the pro-railroad questions asked by Capehart and Robertson. He had reason to be. For it was soon obvious that their questions were being ghost-written by B. & O. men attending the hearing. In fact, there was no secret in Robertson's case. Frederick E. Baukages, B. & O. attorney, openly and brazenly gave the Virginia Senator little slips of paper with jotted questions to ask witnesses.

Capehart has been more discreet. He uses a middle man. One of his office assistants, Dewey Waas, takes the questions from B. & O.'s Baukages in the corridor outside the hearing room and later passes them to the Indiana Senator. Senator Tobey ground his teeth when he discovered what was going on, but said nothing.

However, the New Hampshirite's pent-up rage exploded on Baukages the other day when he interrupted Tobey several times during the cross-examination of a witness.

"You've been making yourself a little too prominent around here," Tobey shot at the B. & O. representative. "Suppose you go over there and sit down—and shut up!"

So Mr. Baukages, who draws $18,500 a year from the B. & O., has now been more silent.

(Note—Senator Tobey is interested in the peculiar way the B. & O. gave juicy jobs to RFC officials at the same time it obtained lush RFC loans.

Capital Chaff

THIS comes under the heading of "Strange as it Seems." Today it's very hard to find anyone in Congress who will admit that he was really in favor of abolishing the OPA. They're all for it now—just one year late. . . . Surveys by the Council of Economic Advisers indicate that, despite Truman's price program, there's been no real reduction in the cost of living. However, Truman should be given credit for having halted the trend toward even higher prices. . . . Congratulations to Senator Russell of Georgia for urging his fellow Senators to consult President Truman before they passed the labor bill rather than passing it first and risking a veto afterward. . . . Truman is afraid the Eightieth Congress may do to rent control what the Seventy-ninth Congress did to the OPA. Under Senator Taft's legislative agenda, Congress will not act on the rent-control bill until just a few days before adjournment. The real estate lobby, which is convinced that it has enough votes to destroy control, then hopes to put over a weasel-worded rent-control bill, which will be passed so late in the session that the President will be unable to veto it without getting blamed for destroying controls completely. That's exactly what happened to the OPA last year. . . . Mayor O'Dwyer of New York is not only cleaning the dirt out of Tammany Hall, but he is rubbing the Tammany tiger's nose in it. This week Mayor O'Dwyer arranged for the new Tammany Hall to give several thousand dollars' worth of forsythia bushes to be planted along Park ave.—a tribute to GIs who died overseas. Mayor O'Dwyer's new slogan for Tammany is: "Tammany no longer takes from the city; it gives to the city."

Under the Dome

DEMOCRATIC leaders have informed Truman that a 25-State private survey shows most Democratic voters oppose the Greek-Turkish loan, largely because it may weaken the United Nations. . . . Administration leaders now admit privately there will be no universal military training bill passed this year. . . . While Congress slashes the Bureau of Labor Statistics to ribbons, Senator Taft's Joint Congressional Economic Committee is spending extra dough to have Dun & Bradstreet make an economic survey which overlaps the Bureau of Labor Statistics . . . Maj. Gen. Philip Fleming, for the past 10 years head of public works and various other civilian agencies, will be back in the Regular Army soon. He is the only Army officer who attends Cabinet meetings. . . . Democratic big guns, including Mrs. Roosevelt, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, and Gael Sullivan, will speak at the June 5 Jefferson Day dinner in Los Angeles. Secretary of the Interior "Cap" Krug will speak in San Francisco.

Extra High Pay Is Urged For Top Producing Workers

By The Associated Press

Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) yesterday urged "extra high wages for extra high production" to sustain prosperity.

"Within the grasp of the American people is the greatest period of prosperity in the history of this or any other nation," Knowland declared in broadcast.

But both high wages and maximum production must be achieved, he said, for a "sustained prosperous America"—for "the great increase in the Nation's real wealth which must be the basis of truly higher living standards."

He counseled "broad adoption of a system of paying fair, guaranteed wages for average production, and extra high wages for extra high production."

Labor and management, he said, should consider setting up together "a system of wage payments which will make maximum production and the highest possible wage payments, in line with good pricing policies, clearly in the interest of both."

This system should have four objectives, he said:

1. To make it profitable for labor as well as management to achieve maximum output "and lowest possible unit costs."
2. To make payment of maximum wages profitable to management as well as labor.
3. To make it clearly in the interest of both to keep up production during contract negotiations, making strikes unprofitable because all will feel they are getting their fair share of the fruits of production.
4. "To give the consumer a break through production of more and better goods at lower unit cost."

Philippines Government Has Too Many Trucks

Manila, May 19 (AP).—The Philippines government has so many trucks it doesn't know what to do.

The catch is: Presidential Secretary Emilio Abello told reporters today that of 42,000 trucks found in United States depots turned over to the government, most are damaged and are of the 6x6 heavy cargo type, too expensive to operate in a peacetime economy.

Abello said that with cheaper commercial type trucks becoming available, the government probably would have to disassemble most of its hoard and try to make something out of selling the parts.

Farley Puts Burden Of Peace on Russia

New York, May 18 (INS).—Former Postmaster General James A. Farley said today there will be no hope of permanent peace in the world until Russia agrees with the other Allies on terms for Germany.

Farley spoke at the ninth annual communion breakfast of the St. George Association of the New York postoffice in the Hotel Commodore. He said:

Wherever and whenever you ride public transit in Washington, you're in the front row of a colorful show appealing to Washington buyers.

Next time you board a street-car or bus, look at the Transitads (car cards) and you'll see what we mean.

Transitads (car cards) keep you informed of the products and services that are "for sale" in Washington. To get attention, to display their products and services to best advantage, Transit-ad-vertisers present their messages in eye-compelling colors. That's a definite aid to you when you're out buying a particular product or brand on your merchant's shelves.

More than that, new products, new services are constantly being announced via Transitads. It might well be that you are a potential buyer for a new product or service that's being offered on a Transitad right now. Check the Transitads today as you're riding the street-car or bus. Wherever you sit (or stand) you're in the front row.

Chrysler Due To Resume in 4 Divisions

Detroit, May 19 (AP).—Passenger car and truck production, hampered by body sheet steel shortages, continued today at below the January-February-March levels, but there was some hope of an upturn with the resumption of output by Chrysler Corp.'s various divisions.

De Soto, Dodge, Plymouth and Chrysler divisions were scheduled to reopen their final assembly lines tomorrow after being idle since May 9, when a lack of cold rolled sheet steel forced Briggs Manufacturing Co. to cut off the Chrysler supply of passenger car bodies.

Packard Also to Resume

With the reopening of the Chrysler assembly lines and seven Briggs plants tomorrow approximately 26,000 workers will return to their jobs. Also scheduled to reopen tomorrow is the Packard final assembly line, halted last Wednesday because of materials shortages.

The Packard lines have been closed almost one day for every working day since January 1, because of inability to obtain adequate supplies.

Adding modestly to the week's expected volume is an indicated upturn in Nash output after a 30 per cent cutback about 10 days ago because of steel scarcities. Although Nash had to cut down from 540 cars a day to 400, it already has turned out approximately 45,000 cars this year, only a little less than half its total 1946 output.

Industry sources quite generally look for a marked improvement in the supply situation during the latter months of this year. The outlook immediately ahead, however, is anything but encouraging and additional shutdowns between now and mid-July are not unlikely.

Steel Stockpile Low

With the possible exception of Kaiser-Frazer Corp. no car maker has had enough of a steel stockpile to permit more than 60 per cent of capacity operation. Kaiser-Frazer's limiting shortage was car engines. With increased shipments from its engine division, car output is being stepped up, with 11,000 units scheduled for the present month.

The trade paper Automotive News placed the industry's output last week at 53,156 cars and 20,370 trucks, the lowest week of the year so far.

Bosox Gain Split as Ted Homers in 9th

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IN LATE YEARS it was reluctantly that Clark Griffith would say, "I guess Hal Chase was the greatest first baseman of all." It was a begrudging tribute, because Chase was on baseball's blacklist for concealing knowledge of the 1919 Black Sox fix, and otherwise suspected of gambling on ball games, and Griffith was bitter toward the man who was despoiling baseball.

POVICH

But when the dispatch from Colusa, Calif., reported the death of Chase yesterday at the age of 64, the Nats' owner mellowed a bit. Now he talked enthusiastically of Chase's skill as a first baseman, saying, "You wouldn't believe a man could do all the things on the ball field Chase could do. There wasn't a modern first baseman who could come close to him, There wasn't ever any 'second Hal Chase.' He was in a class by himself."

Griffith was Chase's first manager in the big leagues, he related. "A friend of mine named Carroll who was traveling on the West Coast kept writing me of an 18-year-old boy in the California League I ought to sign. That was in 1904. It was no great sin to jump a contract in those days, and Chase reported to my New York Highlanders right away, and right away we knew we had come up with the fanciest first baseman we ever saw."

YOUNG CHASE was a perfectly proportioned 6-foot, 180-pounder who became Griffith's regular first baseman from the first day he reported. "We'd never seen the like of him, especially on bunts. Those were the days of bunting in baseball, you know, and Chase would start creeping in toward the plate with the pitcher's wind-up, daring the hitter to lay one down or knock it past him. I've seen him go all the way to the third base foul line from first, and throw batters out on bunts.

"He didn't use one of those trapper mitts with the big claw that first baseman like these days. He had a little old-fashioned, round mitt, not much bigger than a pancake, but he could get ground balls or pick throws out of the dirt like no other man who ever lived. Joe Kuhel was the closest to Chase with his fancy Dan stepping around the bag, but I'd have to say that Kuhel at his best was only a pale imitation of Chase.

"He could have played any position in the infield. In fact, we did have him at second, third and short sometimes, and he was great in all positions. Strange thing about him, he finally led the National League in hitting some years later but with us he couldn't hit much at the start. Willie Keeler and I gave up on him as a hitter, but Kid Elberfeld finally worked with him, and he made it, using Elberfeld's short bat."

WHEN GRIFFITH resigned as manager of the Yankees in June of 1908, Chase quit, too. "He did it out of a sense of loyalty to me," says the Nats' owner, "and said he wouldn't play for any other manager on the Yankees. He went back to California and played outlaw ball for a while. I had a great admiration for Chase until he started getting mixed up in the shady business that finally caught up with him."

Baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown was barred to Chase after he was blacklisted by Judge Landis, after making statements that he knew of the conspiracy by the White Sox to throw the 1919 World Series to Cincinnati in a plot with gamblers. Chase's defense was that "I'm no squealer." Despite the acknowledgment that he was baseball's incomparable star at first base, it was announced that any votes for him in the balloting for a niche at Cooperstown would not be recognized.

"He drifted down to Mexico after 1919 and was trying to set himself up as the czar of Mexican baseball, but his past caught up with him," Griffith said. "The president of the American League, Ban Johnson, was a personal friend of the then President of Mexico and prevailed on him to deport Chase from that country in the interest of Mexican baseball. Chase came back to America and drifted to the outlaw semipros, but never made a good living."

WHENEVER THE SUBJECT of crooked baseball is broached to Griffith, he uses the example of Chase to point up the difficulty of fixing a ball game. Chase was suspected even before the 1919 scandal, and Griffith recalls particularly a game between the Cincinnati Reds and Boston Braves at Boston in 1917.

"Chase and a couple of other players were betting against their own team, the Reds, and were all ready to collect in the ninth inning with the Braves having a 2-0 lead. Chase was first up for Cincinnati in the ninth and struck out. The next batter who was in on the fix, laid down a bunt expecting to be thrown out, but was safe when the pitcher threw wild to first. They had three hitters in a row trying to throw the game, and the next hitter grounded to the Boston shortstop, who also made a wild throw and the Reds had two on.

"A bit later, a Cincinnati batter who wasn't betting on the game, knocked a three-run homer and won it for the Reds. There's no sure way to fix a ball game."

Tribe Beats Yanks, 5-4, Peck Homers

New York, May 19 (AP).—Leading all the way, the up and coming Cleveland Indians withstood late inning New York Yankee rallies second straight victory over the today to gain a 5-4 decision, their Yanks.

The Tribe jumped on Rookie Right Hander Don Johnson, who was making his first start since May 3, for two runs in the second inning on a hit batter, Joe Gordon's double, a passed ball and Ken Keltner's single. Cleveland added two more off relief hurler Al Lyons in the fourth and another in the seventh when Hal Peck homered.

The Yanks fought back and tallied once in fourth, driving starter Roger Wolff to cover in favor of rookie Byron Stephens who eventually received credit for the win.

Stephens blanked the Yanks until the seventh when Charley Keller smashed his seventh homer of the year with one on. Pinchhitter Frank Colman homered in the eighth to pull the Yanks to within one run of a tie but Steve Gromek, who came on in the ninth after Stephens was removed for a pinchhitter, retired the Yanks in order after walking Bobby Brown.

Gordon Happy He Sank Yanks

New York, May 1 (AP).—Cleveland's Joe Gordon was a happy man today as he faced his former team, the New York Yankees, for the second time this season.

Jumpin' Joe, hailed for years as one of the top second sackers in the majors, slumped last season and had a very bad time of it all around.

Traded to the Indians, Gordon has come back with a bang and through Sunday's game had a .308 average that included seven homers. He met up with the Yanks for the first time this season yesterday and collected a neat three-for-three win with a homer thrown in.

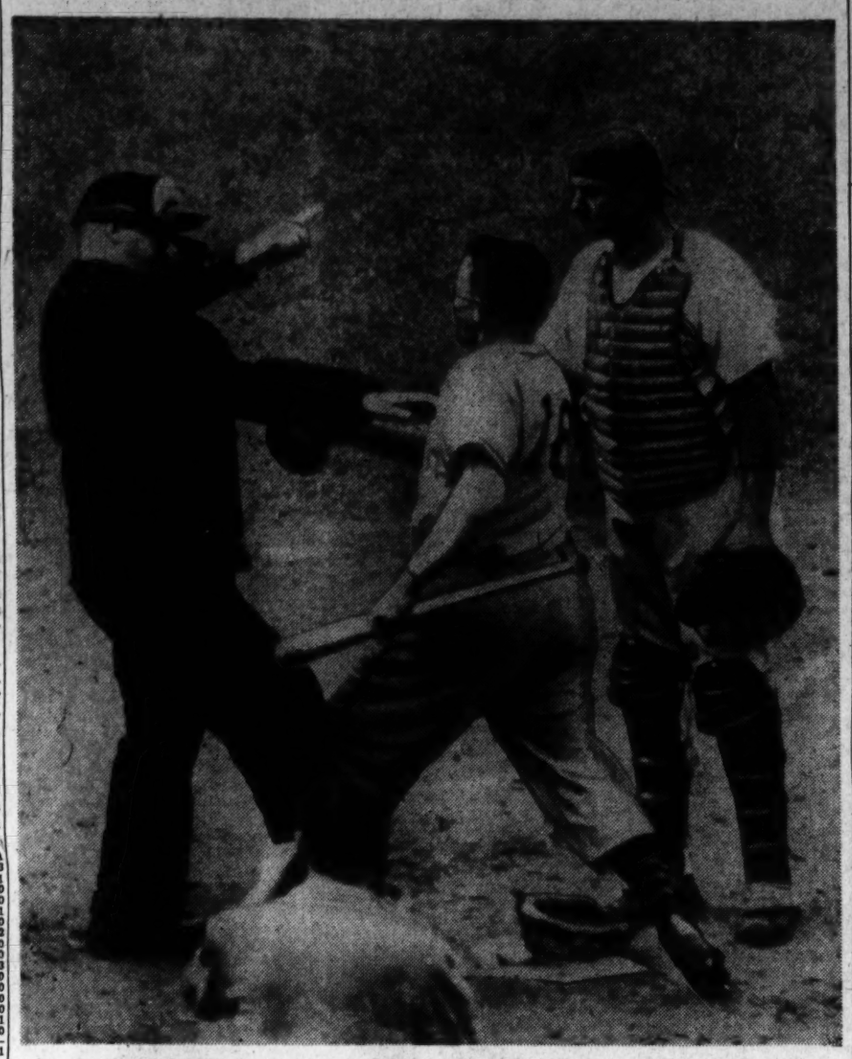
"The best thing MacPhail (Larry MacPhail, Yankee president) ever did for me was trade me," Gordon said. "I only wish that he had been here to see me go to work on his team for the first time."

MacPhail, much to Gordon's regret, was out of town.

Gordon revealed that he, MacPhail and Bill Dickey, who was one of the four Yank managers last year, engaged in a stormy session last season in which the Yankee president accused him of laying down and warned him he was through with the club.

"I walked out of the meeting twice," Joe said, "only to have Dickey call me back.

"MacPhail said I was out of the lineup for good, but Dickey told Larry that he was running the team and as soon as my leg healed I would be back or Larry could get himself another manager."



BIG GEORGE MAGERKURTH of the National League umpiring staff points the way to the showers to Bill Rigney, third baseman of the Giants, at Wrigley Field, Chicago. Rigney is expostulating against Magerkurth's ruling that he interfered with a throw by Bob Scheffing, Cubs' catcher, who is standing by

Trades Loom As Nats Seek Better Punch

At least one and possibly several major trades involving key figures among the Nats are being cooked up in President Clark Griffith's little stucco office by the ball park gates.

Still seeking a potent punch in the thus far anemic swinging lineup, the Nats are particularly interested in getting hold of a hard-hitting infielder—if any.

Right now the club is overrun with outfielders with no less than six on the squad of 28. Only five will be retained, Of the six—Stan Spence, Buddy Lewis, Joe Grace, George Case and the two recently acquired right-handed hitters, Tom McBride and Felix Mackiewicz—at least one is expected to be wearing the spangles of another club before the June 15 trading deadline is reached.

Spence, Lewis and McBride, the latter acquired only last week for a price believed to be around $20,000 from the Red Sox, appear fairly certain to be retained. However, should another club come up with an offer that Griff believes will benefit the stumbling Nats it is no certainty they will be inviolate.

Griff yesterday said there wasn't anything doing—"right now."

Vice President Calvin Griffith said the same thing. He added, however, that six outfielders were too many an dthat "something should be doing before the June 15 deadline." But he didn't say what.

Manager Ossie Bluege also ducked the issue nicely, saying: "We shall just have to wait and see what we shall see."

At any rate, the long-distance telephones and telegraph wires are getting a fairly good workout from the little stucco office.

Detroit Gets First, 3-2, In 12 Innings

Boston, May 19 (AP).—With one out in the ninth inning and the Detroit Tigers ahead 4-3, Ted Williams blasted a two-run homer into the right field bleachers for a 5-4 victory for the Boston Red Sox who thus divided a double-header with the Tigers before 28,289 paid fans.

The Tigers took the opener 3-2 in 12 innings. Third sacker George Kell doubled home Eddie Lake, who had walked, for the Detroit triumph.

The split left the visitors still two games ahead of the American League champions.

However, Eddie Mayo's double off the left field rampart, Birdie Tebbetts' sacrifice anad pinch-hitter Doc Cramer's blazing single through the box sent the Tigers ahead in their half of the ninth, setting the stage for Williams' blast.

The Sox scored twice in the third inning of the first game and seemed headed for victory behind Dave Ferriss. Detroit tallied once in both the sixth and eighth and the game went along that way until the 12h when Kell's blow decided the winner.

Cubs Break Loss Streak, Beat Bums, 8

Chicago, May 19 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs moved into undisputed possession of third place in the National League today and dropped the Brooklyn Dodgers into the second division by trimming the flock, 8-7.

The win also snapped a five-game Chicago losing streak and moved them to within four percentage points of the second place New York Giants who were idle.

Andy Pafko aand Clyde McCullough led the Bruin offensive by batting in three runs apiece as the Cubs hammered five Dodger pitchers for 12 hits.

The game was held up for over an hour on account of rain in the sixth inning with the Cubs leading, 7-5.

Chicago shoved two runs across the plate in the opening frame and after Brooklyn stormed back and knocked Hank Borowy from the hill with three-run barrage in the second, the Bruins drove starter Hal Gregg to cover with a three-run attack in the third and led the rest of the way.

Pafko knocked in what proved to be the winning run in the sixth by doubling home Stan Hack who opened the frame with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice.

British Jockey Richards Boots Home No. 3261

London, May 19 (U.P.).—Veteran Gordon Richards, Britain's champion jockey, broke the world's riding record today when he booted home his 3261st winner aboard Lebose Giard at Worcester race track.

Richards smashed the previous record of 3260 winners held by Sam Heapy, a British-born, Belgian jockey.

$2,500,000 Will Not Build a Stadium

Baltimore, May 19 (AP).—If Baltimore wants a stadium seating 100,000 it is going to have to raise twice the $2,500,000 loan approved by the voters May 6, the Board of Awards was informed today.

A. M. Anderson, deputy director of parks in charge of engineering, estimated the stadium would cost five million dollars if erected on the present site.

Greco Queried On 'Racketeers'

New York, May 19 (AP).—Johnny Greco, Montreal welterweight, was given a summons today to appear before the New York County grand pury on June 4 after appearing voluntarily for questioning in the district attorney's probe of reports that racketeers exert influence in the boxing business.

Greco was questioned for more than an hour and a half before lunch by Assistant District Andrew Seidler. The boxer was accompanied by his attorney, Louis de Zwirk of Montreal.

Seidler's only comment was that "Greco is an important figure in the boxing world." He would not amplify.

Other fighters who have been questioned during the investigation include Tami Mauriello of New York, Henry Armstrong of Los Angeles, and Danny Webb, also of Montreal.

Durocher and Wife Still 'Not Talking'

Los Angeles, May 19 (AP).—Laraine Day and her husband outside California, Leo Durocher, flew in today from New York to greet the press with their customary "no coment."

Durocher, long noted for his talkativeness, but silent in the presence of the local press since his elopement, answered a reporter's question: "What do you have to say?" with:

"I have nothing to say. I have no comment. Anything that's said will have to be said by Mr. Rickey."

Pirates' Gustine In Second Place

New York, May 19 (AP).—Harry "Little Dixie" Walker, one of the stars of the St. Louis Cardinals' 1946 World Series triumph, has skyrocketed to the top in the National League's individual batting race.

The fleet ballhawk, who recently was shipped by the Cards to the Philadelphia Phillies, was batting below .300 two weks ago, but he clammed out 14 hits in his last 24 trips t othe plate to waltz to the top rung with .390 mark.

While Harry went on his batting rampage, his more illustrious brother, Fred "Dixie" Walker of the Brooklyn Dodgers, went into a slump and tumbled from the lead into a fifth place deadlocked with New York's Johnny Mize and Cincinnatti's Ray Lamanno. Walker, who led the circuit the past two weeks, now boasts a .333 swat mark. The records include games through Sunday.

Frankie Gustine of the Pittsburgh Pirates also fared well at the plate during the week, tacking nine points to his mark to move into the runner-up slot with .351. Bob Elliott of Boston and Emil Verban of Philadelphia are tied for third with .337.

Mize clubbed another homer during the span to increase his pace-setting output to 10.

Southpaw Warren Spahn of Bostn moved into a tie with veteran Schoolboy Rowe of the Phils for pitching honors. Both have now six games without suffering a setback.

Lewis Nosedives After Every Lead

Chicago, May 19 (AP).—The pitchers are beginning to catch up with the hitters in the American League, but Detroit's Pat Mullin still heads the parade with a big .413 and Boston's Ted Williams is back bidding for slugging honors.

Mullin last week nose-dived 28 points with seven hits in 21 trips, but kept 53 points ahead of Bob Dillinger of St. Louis and George McQuinn, New York's intermittent first sacker, who were tied for second with .360 each.

The erstwhile runner-up, Buddy Lewis of Washington, plummeted below the top 10 hitters with a 74-point drop from .382 to .308 as he collected only three hits in 23 appearances.

Williams, although he skidded 16 points to .322, climbed from eighth to sixth place in hitting as he wrested the home run leadership from Joe Gordon of Cleveland with eight, moved into a tie with Boston team-mate Bobby Doerr in runs batted in with 21, and assumed the run-making lead with 24.

McQuinn, who had played in only 21 games through Sunday, showed the biggest improvement during the week with a 37-point rise on seven hits in 13 trips.

Luke Applying of Chicago was in fourth spot with .346, followed by George Binks, Philadelphia, .323; Williams, .322; Hal Peck and Manager Lou Boudreau, both of Cleveland, .321 each; Bob Kennedy, a newcomer to the top 10, these players all slumped during the week.

Other specialized leaders: Dillinger, most hits, 41, and stolen bases, six; Mullin, doubles, 13, and Dave Philley, Chicago; Elmer Valo, Philadelphia, and Paul Lehner, St. Louis, triples, four each.

Freddy Hutchinson, Detroit's comeback flinger, continued to top the pitchers with a 5-1 record for .833, while Hal Newhouser, another Tiger tosser, overtook Cleveland's Bob Feller in strikeouts at 50.

Nats Cut Squad Sell Luman Harris To Louisville Club

Luman (Lum) Harris, who came to the Nats this year with Luther Knerr in exchange for outfielder George (Bingo) Binks, yesterday was sold outright to the Louisville Club of the American Association, the Nats' front office announced tyesterday.

Harris appeared in only three games this year with the Nats, working only two and two-thirds innings. He gave up seven hits and walked five allowing seven runs.

Harris' going cuts the Nats' squad down to 28, one under the legal limit of 25 plus four former servicemen.

Celeb Sidelights

Taft Falls Over Dog but Keeps Dignity

By Whitney Martin,
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, May 19 (AP).—Sights we never expected to see, but which we saw at the National Celebrities golf tournament at Washington over the weekend:

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower digging doggedly at a ball in a sand trap with Admiral Chester Nimitz, the scorer, standing over him sympathetically (a real Army-Navy merger).

Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, and Bobby Cruickshank lined up on the first tee, bringing a blorious past right up to date.

Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney stalking along the fairway chatting amiably, with mutual assault and abttery farthest from their thoughts.

Senator Robert Taft stumbling over a dog and falling flat, but retaining his dignity regardless.

Clark Griffith hitting what amounted to a foul off the first tee, leaving the gate wide open for a line drive by Gen. Omar Bradley,

Bing Crosby watching curiously as Happy Chandler addressed his ball like he was expecting a fast one on the outside. (The Baseball Commissioner really has a baseball swing.)

Those were just a few of the sights observed at this most unusual of all golf tournaments, staged for a cause which needs no defense—the promotion of juvenile welfare.

* * * * *

IN SOME WAYS it was a popularity contest and those competing deserve a world of credit for not only exposing their golf weaknesses to the public gaze, but for giving the gallery a chance to show its preference.

It must be quite a blow to self-esteem for a foursome of Congressmen and Senators to tee off and be trailed only by their caddies, while the gallery waited to follow what it considered a more interesting quartet.

But the entrants were willing to swallow their pride to do their bit for the cause.

Maybe it is a commentary on the public mind that the interest of the spectators primarily centered on the stars of the sports and entertainment worlds rather than the renowned figures of so-called public life. That's how it was, however, and probably always will be.

* * * *

IT HAS BEEN decided to make the event an annual affair, although it's just a personal opinion that it should be confined to one day instead of spreading it over two days. Some of the plump and muscle-rusty gents just can't take it two days in a row, bogging badly after the first day's unaccustomed activity. Also, a great many of the entrants are very busy individuals indeed and to devote two days to even such a worthy cause is more than they can do.

If the event did nothing else it exposed the human side of celebrities who too often are thought of only in their usual Senate roles. Suddenly they become human, flesh-and-blood guys, with the same yearning for laughter and fun, the same enjoyment of common pleasures as other people.

Ike Eisenhower, for instance, ambling along cheerfully in his yellow sports shirt, might be a member of your own favorite foursome, and you can say the same about practically every one of the celebrated competitors. Nobody can be very superior and dignified and unbending when hacking a ball out of a trap or sending a dribbler off the tee.

From the moment Eisenhower demanded a mulligan (a second shot off the first tee) at the start of the event, the free-and-easy, casual atmosphere was assured. Scores didn' matter much. It was just one big, happy party, with a hangover of aching muscles and joints.

Four Qualify In PGA Trial

Baltimore, Md., May 19.—Walter Romans of the Baltimore Country Club and Jack Isaacs of Langley Field, Va., led a field of 31 competitors in the PGA Sectional Qualifying round at the Mount Pleasant Municipal course here today with 36-hole totals of 146.

The other two qualifiers from this area were Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., who had a 149, and John O'Donnell, who defeated Washington's Cliff Spencer after a four-hole play-off.

Spencer and O'Donnell finished the 36 holes with 151 each. O'Donnell won with a bogie five on the fourth hole as Spencer needed six strokes.

The National PGA championships will be held in Detroit June 18-24.

Hursey, Bee Bee, Post Forfeits

Smuggy Hursey and Bee Bee Washington yesterday agreed to post $500 forfeits guaranteeing their appearance in the Griffith Stadium ring next Monday.

Washington's check has already been turned over to the District Boxing Commission, while Hursey's check is expected to be in the hands of the commission today. Hursey is training here in Washington, while Bee Bee is working out for the ten-round scrap in his Summit, N. J., training quarters.

Leiss Stars In 'Y Meet

John Leiss of the YMCA captured six firsts and a second to dominate the annual YMCA indoor track meet which ended yesterday on the Y indoor track.

Leiss' performance easily won individual high point honors, ahead of John Risler of Woodward Prep. Leiss totaled 35 points, 12 more than Risler.

Holder of the District 10-mile championship, Leiss' iron man act set a new mark for total number of first places in the annual meet.

100-YARD DASH—1, John Risler, 13.1; 2, John Leiss, 13.4.
220-YARD DASH—1, John Leiss, 29.8; 2, John Risler, 30.3.
440-YARD DASH—1, John Leiss, 65; 2, Milsire Degan, 73.6.
880-YARD RUN—1, John Leiss, 2:23.
ONE-MILE RUN—1, John Leiss, 5:10.
TWO-MILE RUN—1, John Leiss, 11:26; 2, Emmett Sadler, 16:02.
RUNNING BROAD JUMP—1, John Risler, 18 ft. 8 in.; 2, Phineas Indritis, 18 ft. 11 in.
STANDING BROAD JUMP—1, John Leiss, 9 ft. 8 in.; 2, John Risler, 9 ft.

Ike Practiced Early for Celebrities Golf

Didn't Want to Make 'Fool' of Himself

By Bob Considine

SIDE GLANCES AT CELEBRITIES:

Gen. of the Army Dwight Eisenhower fairly makes the politicos of Washington bite their nails in envy. The man has a wey of doing everything just right, and with an easy-going grin, to wit: the manner in which he teed off in the opening round of the Washington Post's "National Celebrities Golf Tournament."

CONSIDINE

Always the painstaker, the general sneaked a few practice rounds at Chevy Chase "just to be sure I don't make a damn fool of myself on the first tee."

Recently an old friend of the general came to him with a complaint that his, the friend's daughter was reluctant to continue with her music lessons. The general took time out to drop a note to the girl in which he said he'd willingly give up two of the stars on his shoulders if he had listened to his own parents and continued with his own musical training. Sent her a picture, too, inscribed, "To ——, who is going to be one of the best musicians of her day."

The reason the general makes the politicos wince is that simply by a nod of his head he could carry either party into the White House in '48. But he won't nod.

BABE DIDRICKSON Zaharias, the greatest lady athlete of all time, and the best player in the Celebrities Tournament, and that goes for Bobby Jones, Gene Sarazen, Bing Crosby the other stars, is 140 pounds of hard muscle, but with all the instincts of a doting wife.

She's about to leave for England, probably to become the first American girl to win the British Women's Amateur championship. Her husband, George Zaharias, Denver promoter and once upon a time the most ferocious heavyweight rassler in the business, had hopes of joining her overseas, via airliner.

But she nixed the idea. "Planes still fall in the ocean now and then Georgie," she told her 300-pound behemoth, "but one's not going down with you unless I'm there to swim you to shore."

Babe could do it, too. She once hit 13 home runs in a row, played football with a tough male semi-pro team, was an Olympic track champion, played professional basketball with a men's team, can fight like a good welterweight, is a great swimmer, horsewoman, tennis player, and is going to take up skiing this winter.

"And when I get a little older I'm going to have me some kids," the redoubtable Babe says.

DEAR FOLKS:

Looks as if Walter Haight, the horse, is getting around more than Walter Haight, the man. J. Omiski, who claimed the 8-year-old from Alan Clarke, sold him to Stanley Greene, jr., today. Jockey Al Snider is topping the jockeys here going into the final week of action. Death of Seabiscuit on the West Coast brought something of a coincidence here. James Ross, jr., clerk of scales and whose father is track superintendent, was rummaging through some stuff at his home at the track and found a whip belonging to the late George Woolf, who often rode Seabiscuit. The whip probably was lost by Woolf at the close of some meeting and was stored for him. Young Ross found it a few hours before he heard Seabiscuit had passed away. Although it rained in many sections of the State hard enough to cause traffic jams and flood cellars, the local area escaped with light showers and the Monday program opened on a fast oval. Jockey Johnny Gilbert left for California. A. C. Paul of Washington, D. C., had reason to smile after the second race. He bred Gold Braid, the $10.20 winner of the sprint and watched the 3-year-old son of Principal carry his colors to victory. Calumet's Pep Well and Greentree's Coincidence, the latter a doubtful starter, were assigned top weight of 126 pounds in the $20,000 Havre de Grace Handicap for Saturday. See you on the rail.

9-Year-Old Sets Pace, Then Falters

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Havre de Grace, Md., May 19.—Service Pilot, disqualified the only time he got home in front this year, finally won and made it stick this afternoon.

Carrying the colors of the Christian Stables, the 5-year-old came through the stretch as if he were late for dinner and was the winner by two lengths. For some reason the race was named the St. Michaels.

Whenever this Service Pilot victory is mentioned, however, the speaker should be careful to give an "assist" to a 9-year-old named Boston Man. This ancient collection of horse flesh finished third, beaten a head for second by H. G. Bedwell's Hammer-Lock.

They laughed when H. M. (Suitcase) Simpson of Washington entered his Boston Man in this race and they almost keeled over when he assigned Don Boston as the rider. Boston Man had been doing his racing, and well, at points like Pascoag and Charles Town. He was supposed to show a flash of speed and then drop to last.

Doesn't Follow Script

Boston Man, however, didn't follow that script. He was close in the run to the backstretch as On the River and Hammer-Lock vied for the doubtful honor of setting the pace. Hammer-Lock finally shook off On the River and seemed capable of drawing out.

But Boston Man gathered momentum from some where and had the nerve to get up abreast of Hammer-Lock. Two further embarass the haughty company, he took the lead and the favorite players moaned as Service Pilot was not moving up at this point, approaching the stretch.

Being outrun at this stage took a lot of the starch out of Hammer-Lock. Service Pilot then rallied and came on with a bold rush to win going away. Boston Man weakened and fell before Hammer-Lock by a scant head, but he certainly proved a helpmate by Service Pilot.

Winner Pays $5.20

The winner was a $5.20 favorite with the crowd of 9000 and was clocked in 1:42 1/5 for the mile and 70 yards.

The day's feature wasn't the only spot in which the favorite players had their innings. Public choices were popping through the afternoon, five of them finding their way to the victory circle.

The Calumet Farm, which seems ashamed to have a non winner in the barn, ran another 2-year-old out of the mainden ranks in the third race. Making her first start on any race track, In a Rush, a daughter of Blenheim II and Hastily Yours, walked her beat in winning fashion, getting home two lengths in advance of the closest opposition. She paid $4.60. Beautiful women and handsome men who invested in the right daily double combination of Balu Mike (Number 3) and Gold Braid (No. 9) collected a $33.20 mutuel on the twin wager.

Coolidge, Eastern Favored In Interhigh Playoffs Today

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The interhigh baseball league this week closes down on one of its tightest races in recent years with the championship playoff series that starts today.

The defending champion Calvin Coolidge Colts, who wound up the regular season in first place, invade the home of the fourth place Western Red Raiders, and the second place Eastern Ramblers entertain the third place McKinley Tech Trainers in the opening day games, both beginning at 3:30 p. m.

Finals Tomorrow

Winners of today's games will open the finals tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. in the big league setting of Griffith Stadium.

The finals will be played on a two-out-of-three basis, with the second game on Thursday also being staged at Griffith Stadium. If a third game is necessary, it will take place on Monday.

On the basis of earlier performances, the Colts and Ramblers are favored to win their games today, and advances to the final series.

The Colts, with Tex Jones on the mound, shut out the Western club, 1-0, earlier in the season, and are expected to come back with Jones again today. The Raider starter will probably by Fred Cohoon.

Jones Had a 2-Hitter

In the last Colt-Raider meeting, Jones twirled a two-hitter, and struck out 13, but was fortunate to win. Only the aggressive baserunning of Bill Witzel, who walked and then stole second, third and home, gave Coolidge the win. Cohoon, the loser, yielded only four safeties.

The other game will see Bernie Myles of Eastern opposing Bobby Jones of Tech. When these two last met, Myles and the Ramblers came out on top, 6-4. Jones, who usually has good control walked three men in the first inning, and the Easterners, with the help of two Tech errors shoved four runs across the plate.

BALU MIKE was not hurried early, rallied to dispose of EVEN STAR and held on gamely. EVEN STAR was rushed to the front at once, drew out and closed willingly but was unable to resist the winner. GAY WILDY lacked early speed, came with a rush along the inside rail in the closing test. COMELY BABE raced forwardly and wide and tired at the close. GOOD SERVICE closed willingly from a sluggish beginning. WHY CRY improved his position on the outside and then faltered. O. K. DORIS flashed speed and stopped.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $3000. For 3-year-olds; claiming price $5000. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:49. Off at 2:49. Winner, A. C. Paul's b. c. (3) by Principal—Victory Mill by Hilltown. Trained by D. Chamblin. Value, $1950. Time, 1:12⅘.

GOLD BRAID, $10.20, $5.20, $3.20; KULINA, $16.80, $7.00; GOLDEN ARROW, $3.20.

GOLD BRAID was steadied after breaking alertly, came wide for racing room, responded when shaken up and wore down KULINA in the concindum strides. KULINA went to the front early, set a good pace and just missed staying. GOLDEN ARROW was under restraint while closest to the early pace and weakened in the final drive. DISPELLED saved ground while close up and weakened gradually. KNIGHT'S HURRY went well to the stretch and faltered. The others were outrun.

DAILY DOUBLE—BALU MIKE AND GOLD BRAID—PAID $33.20

THIRD RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $2500. For maiden 2-year-old fillies. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:21. Off at 3:21½. Winner, Calumet Farm's br. f. (2) by Blenheim II—Hastily Yours by John P. Grier. Trained by H. A. Jones. Value, $1625. Time, 0:59⅘.

IN A RUSH, $4.60, $3.40, $3.00; IN THE CLOVER, $6.80, $5.20; BAD LIGHT, $6.00.

IN A RUSH was off alertly, raced BAD LIGHT into defeat and drew out when challenged by IN THE CLOVER. The latter, well placed from the start, came wide into the stretch but could not cope with the winner in the final drive. BAD LIGHT was hard use dirying to run with the winner and tired at the end. BLENLIN lacked early speed and rallied mildly. JEAN JEAN saved ground to improve his position and then tired. FRESH BREEZE displayed early speed and quit.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $3000. For 3-year-olds; claiming price $5000. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:49. Off at 3:49½. Winner, A. Newmeyer's b. c. (3) by Bud Lerner—Lucky Jean by Incantation. Trained by F. Dalee Watts. Value, $1950. Time, 1:13⅘.

TOM FERRIS, $6.00, $3.60, $3.20; SCAT BACK, $4.00, $3.80; TOWN'S BULLY, $8.00.

TOM FERRIS, steadied while in the first flight and on the outside, responded when placed to a drive, disposed of LOUTEY and was being eased at the end. SCAT BACK, allowed to drop back early, came from behind horses and closed boldly as if he can do better. TOWN'S BULLY was close up on the outside early, drifted back and then came gamely at the end. IN saved ground while showing early speed and faltered. LOUTEY was hard ridden while setting the pace and faltered. CONSTANTINOS closed willingly. SCHEME had speed to the stretch and stopped.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $3500. For 3-year-olds; claiming price $7500 to $6500. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:18. Off at 4:18. Winner, A. B. Williams' dk. f. (3) by Count Gallahad—Mannerism II by Manna. Trained by A. S. Dodd. Value, $2275. Time, 1:12⅘.

REGALER, $9.80, $6.00, $4.00; SOMA LAD, $13.80, $9.20; LIDO WAY, $12.60.

REGALER, slow to begin and far back approaching the stretch, came to the outside and closed with a wild rush to win by a head. SOMA LAD, within striking distance from the start, rallied in the stretch to take the lead, but could not resist the winner and just missed. LIDO WAY shook off the leaders to assume command and tired at the end. VIRGINIA BEACH raced evenly. DEVIL MAY CARE raced wide. ROMPING rallied mildly. MISS SCEPTRE was rushed between horses to take an early lead and tired. TRYOUT had early speed.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $4000. The St. Michaels. For 4-year-olds up (grade D). Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:48. Off at 4:47. HE'S NOT KIDDING

Dave Groves notes that this column has recently carried an unusually large number of dog items, and records his reaction in this sketch:

TOKEN COLLECTION

As this item is written, the streetcar token collection for Children's Hospital is climbing toward the 10,000 mark. In addition, more than $100 in cash has been inclosed in the envelopes which have poured in.

It's heartening to know that local folks are pitching in to help this grand old institution.

And it's swell to hear about folks who are thinking up new ways to help. A lady in Hyattsville has some partially filled books of war stamps; she's going to "redeem" them at Children's Hospital. Ann Ryan of 3811 Garfield st. nw., is sending along a refund check that she just received from the Pullman Co. A gentleman in Chevy Chase is sending a refund check he got from Pepco.

The answer to that one is: not now, but probably later.

The old books will have to remain in service for several months, until the new exchanges are completed. Then maybe we can organize a collection of the old phone books, and get some of the junkman's dollars for Children's Hospital.

STREET SCENE

He could hardly keep his eyes off the beauteous blonde who was seated nearby.

As the streetcar bore them downtown, his gaze kept reverting to the golden tresses of his fellow passenger, and after awhile she became aware of his interest.

As the trip progressed, others of us also began to notice the scene which was silently being enacted.

Finally, she reached for the buzzer cord, and prepared to leave. But, as she headed for the door, she stopped for a fleeting moment beside the seat of her admirer and murmured provocatively:

"It's not bleached — it's really blonde."

NO NEWSREEL?

Ruth K. Holstein of 704 Chesapeake ave., Silver Spring, Md., wants me to mention the nursery school puppet shows that will be presented on May 21 at the Silver Spring Intermediate School.

At the afternoon show, the kids will see "Alice in Wonderland" and "Clown Town." In the evening, there will be a variety show plus "Magic Island" (which is based on W. Shakespeare's "The Tempest").

Is show business so bad that even the puppets are running double features?

BAD CORNER

Paul F. Cassady, whose office is at 1928 I st. nw., wonders why there's no traffic light or stop sign at 20th and I sts. nw.

He says that as often as six times a day folks in his office can hear the screeching of brakes, and very often it's followed by the sound of metal crashing into metal.

Inquiry at No. 3 precinct reveals that requests for lights or stop signs must be made to the Department of Vehicles and traffic—and that 20th and I is not considered a particularly bad corner.

Police say that the intersection is on a grade, which might cause some trouble to the heavy traffic which flows through it. But even at that, the corner does not have as bad a record as many others.

(Note to Mr. Cassady: It appears that most of the wrinkled fenders aren't reported to the police, and they therefore have no long record of accidents there.)

SIMILE

As quickly as the lug behind you starts to blow his horn after the traffic light changes to green.

PHONE CALL

My anonymous caller said:

"Here's an item for you— this is just the sort of thing you specialize in.

"On the train to Havre de Grace the other day, we were beefing because the air conditioning wasn't on. On the train coming back that night, we were beefing because the heat wasn't on."

I laughed and said, "That's a fine item. What's your name?"

"Oh, you can't use my name," he replied. "I wasn't supposed to be at Havre. I told the office I was sick in bed."

Grin and Bear It

"He never does anything since he bought those 'leisure' clothes—he was much more useful around the house just wearing old clothes!"

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

You are declarer of today's six no-trump contract and West opens the jack of spades. How do you play?

Declarer wins his slam by end playing West. He takes the opening lead with the spade queen and sees he has eleven top tricks. He'll have his twelfth trick if the hearts break favorably, so declarer cashes the three high hearts but West shows out on the third round. Now the diamond finesse is suggested, but South sees a better play if he can strip West of everything but diamonds.

Declarer cashes the ace, king of spades and his four top clubs. Next he leads a diamond, and when East follows small he plays the nine from his hand. West wins the ten and must then lead away from his diamond king into declarer's ace-queen for the last two tricks. If East plays the ten or jack on the first diamond lead declarer covers with the queen for the same result.

I praise my wife

There are a dozen compliments . . I pay my wife each day . . . And every single time I mean . . . precisely what I say . . . I praise her charming manner and . . . How good she is to me . . . And how she handles everything . . . When we have company . . . her kindness to the children and . . . The budget she prepares . . . And her delightful eagerness . . . To carry all her cares . . . I tell her how she thrills me and . . . How beautiful she looks . . . But most of all I praise her for . . . The tasty meals she cooks . . . Especially the pies and cakes . . . That leave her oven door . . . And all the cookies that the kids . . . And I are hungry for.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

THE DISTRICT LINE

by W. E. G.

HE'S NOT KIDDING

TOKEN COLLECTION

As this item is written, the streetcar token collection for Children's Hospital is climbing toward the 10,000 mark. In addition, more than $100 in cash has been inclosed in the envelopes which have poured in.

It's heartening to know that local folks are pitching in to help this grand old institution.

And it's swell to hear about folks who are thinking up new ways to help. A lady in Hyattsville has some partially filled books of war stamps; she's going to "redeem" them at Children's Hospital. Ann Ryan of 3811 Garfield st. nw., is sending along a refund check that she just received from the Pullman Co. A gentleman in Chevy Chase is sending a refund check he got from Pepco.

And R. C. O'Donnell of 3244 Aberfoyle pl. nw., wants to know whether we can do anything with our old telephone books.

The answer to that one is: not now, but probably later.

The old books will have to remain in service for several months, until the new exchanges are completed. Then maybe we can organize a collection of the old phone books, and get some of the junkman's dollars for Children's Hospital.

STREET SCENE

He could hardly keep his eyes off the beauteous blonde who was seated nearby.

As the streetcar bore them downtown, his gaze kept reverting to the golden tresses of his fellow passenger, and after awhile she became aware of his interest.

As the trip progressed, others of us also began to notice the scene which was silently being enacted.

Finally, she reached for the buzzer cord, and prepared to leave. But, as she headed for the door, she stopped for a fleeting moment beside the seat of her admirer and murmured provocatively:

"It's not bleached — it's really blonde."

NO NEWSREEL?

Ruth K. Holstein of 704 Chesapeake ave., Silver Spring, Md., wants me to mention the nursery school puppet shows that will be presented on May 21 at the Silver Spring Intermediate School.

At the afternoon show, the kids will see "Alice in Wonderland" and "Clown Town." In the evening, there will be a variety show plus "Magic Island" (which is based on W. Shakespeare's "The Tempest").

Is show business so bad that even the puppets are running double features?

BAD CORNER

Paul F. Cassady, whose office is at 1928 I st. nw., wonders why there's no traffic light or stop sign at 20th and I sts. nw.

He says that as often as six times a day folks in his office can hear the screeching of brakes, and very often it's followed by the sound of metal crashing into metal.

Inquiry at No. 3 precinct reveals that requests for lights or stop signs must be made to the Department of Vehicles and traffic—and that 20th and I is not considered a particularly bad corner.

Police say that the intersection is on a grade, which might cause some trouble to the heavy traffic which flows through it. But even at that, the corner does not have as bad a record as many others.

(Note to Mr. Cassady: It appears that most of the wrinkled fenders aren't reported to the police, and they therefore have no long record of accidents there.)

SIMILE

As quickly as the lug behind you starts to blow his horn after the traffic light changes to green.

PHONE CALL

My anonymous caller said:

"Here's an item for you— this is just the sort of thing you specialize in.

"On the train to Havre de Grace the other day, we were beefing because the air conditioning wasn't on. On the train coming back that night, we were beefing because the heat wasn't on."

I laughed and said, "That's a fine item. What's your name?"

"Oh, you can't use my name," he replied. "I wasn't supposed to be at Havre. I told the office I was sick in bed."

Grin and Bear It

"He never does anything since he bought those 'leisure' clothes—he was much more useful around the house just wearing old clothes!"

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

You are declarer of today's six no-trump contract and West opens the jack of spades. How do you play?

Declarer wins his slam by end playing West. He takes the opening lead with the spade queen and sees he has eleven top tricks. He'll have his twelfth trick if the hearts break favorably, so declarer cashes the three high hearts but West shows out on the third round. Now the diamond finesse is suggested, but South sees a better play if he can strip West of everything but diamonds.

Declarer cashes the ace, king of spades and his four top clubs. Next he leads a diamond, and when East follows small he plays the nine from his hand. West wins the ten and must then lead away from his diamond king into declarer's ace-queen for the last two tricks. If East plays the ten or jack on the first diamond lead declarer covers with the queen for the same result.

South makes six no trump losing a diamond trick.

There are a dozen compliments . . I pay my wife each day . . . And every single time I mean . . . precisely what I say . . . I praise her charming manner and . . . How good she is to me . . . And how she handles everything . . . When we have company . . . her kindness to the children and . . . The budget she prepares . . . And her delightful eagerness . . . To carry all her cares . . . I tell her how she thrills me and . . . How beautiful she looks . . . But most of all I praise her for . . . The tasty meals she cooks . . . Especially the pies and cakes . . . That leave her oven door . . . And all the cookies that the kids . . . And I are hungry for.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Jealous Feud Exists Between Sisters-in-Law And Reaches Climax in Spending Competition Now Going On; One Is Ready to Call a Truce

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Before I married Sid—while we were going together—his elder brother married Ann, a girl my age who had an inferiority complex about her poor background. I included her in my activities but was embarrassed when she bragged about things we took for granted.

She basked in the spotlight and strove for superiority over me; but when I became engaged I heard that she was jealous because I had a prettier ring. She was affable at my wedding but after the honeymoon I heard she was jealous because of my prettier wedding band. Animosity grew.

When her baby was born, Ann took the spotlight again. The family was happy that she was happy; and no matter what she did to hurt their feelings, they were always good to her. This made me wonder. I did everything I knew to please them, yet they treated us both the same.

Sid was at camp and I went to join him, leaving Ann in the spotlight. She spent all her time with the family, who wrote how sweet she was. I refused to believe in such a change. When Sid was discharged and we came home—to live temporarily with his family—Ann tried to show that she meant to get along, but she just couldn't be civil to me.

Husband Asks End to Scenes

I TRIED to be nice but when I saw she wasn't serious I gave it up. Once I made a scene and demanded her help with the dishes. She helped thereafter, but Sid didn't back me up. He said he didn't want such a scene again to disturb his mother. Ann was so jealous of my living with the family that she quarreled with the mother and didn't come to the house again during the eight months we were there.

She was glad when I left and made friends with the mother again. But her happiness was shortlived, as I bought a car. Then she bought a fur coat and felt superior until I got one. Then she got a car also and is very happy now, putting on airs. I am miserable and show it. I don't want her as a friend; that's asking too much; but I would like to reach an understanding.

I want us to feel that we aren't in a contest and that we must be happy with each other's gains, which are mutual as our husbands are business partners. How can I win her as a friend and get cooperation from Sid and the family in doing this? Sid thinks I should ignore her, but I can't let the situation ride. Please help me.

G. C.

Complainant Started Feud

DEAR G. C.: I've had to cut your letter in half, but the whole story unveils you as a jealous hypocrite. You've always been more jealous of Ann than she is of you.

It was a jolt when she got into the family ahead of you. Also, the fact that she came of poor background, but beat you to the tape, soured the cream of your sense of consequence in making the grade. Further, your hackles were up about her old acquaintance with Sid. You tried to cover all this with patronizing bravado, playing snob to the hilt. She got the drift but didn't quail. After all, she was "in."

Having annexed Sid, you made sure your rings were finer than hers; then wire-tapped to learn her reactions, of course; and when you heard that she was jealous, you felt just dandy, I suppose, until new waves of petty resentment shook you. Thus the flame of animosity grew, sparked by your attitude and fanned by her defensive sparring.

Tough Opponent Wears Her Down

IN RELATION to Ann, you've started something you can't handle to your satisfaction. She is more than a match for you in woman warfare, it seems. That's why you'd like to call a truce,—because you've begun to respect and fear her as a hardier rival than you'd counted on: more tireless and truculent even than you, once her dander is up. Also, perhaps you've begun to sense that you're losing favor with Sid and the family by clawing at Ann.

At the moment, you're dizzy with anxious spleen. In one breath you say, "I don't want Ann as a friend." In the next, you ask, "How can I win her as a friend?" As for how to gain a truce, I'm not sure you can. If you had got the upper hand and she came courting peace, would you unbend? I doubt it; and events indicate you're two of a kind.

The best advice I can offer is to (1) pray for a real change of heart in yourself, and (2) sue the mother's help as intermediary. From what you say of her heroic equitable courtesy to both hell-raising daughters-in-law, she must be a saintly character; and given full cooperation from you, maybe her tact and wisdom can heal the breach.

CONSTIPATED? SO WAS THIS MAN

Found relief after eating famous breakfast cereal

Wish you could do away with harsh laxatives forever? Then read this sincere, unsolicited letter:

"I had to take laxatives every night before going to bed. Then a friend told me about KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN so I began eating it for breakfast every day. Now I am as regular as clockwork. I think ALL-BRAN is worth its weight in gold!" Mr. Elmer Brelsford, 11 Lincoln Avenue, Norristown, Pa.

You, too, may never have to take a harsh laxative again if you suffer from constipation due to lack of bulk in the diet. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN has brought lasting relief to thousands suffering from this type of constipation. For best results eat ALL-BRAN daily as a cereal or in muffins—and drink plenty of water. Try it! If not completely satisfied after ten days, send the empty carton to the Kellogg Company, Battle Creek, Michigan, and get double your money back.

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is not a purgative but a wholesome food made from the vital outer layers of wheat. Ask your grocer for KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN today.

Girls! Women! Who Suffer Distress Of PERIODIC FEMALE WEAKNESS

with its nervous cranky feelings . . .

Do female functional monthly disturbances make you feel nervous, fidgety, cranky, so tired and "dragged out"—at such times? Then do try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve such symptoms. It's famous for helping girls and women in this way!

Taken regularly — Pinkham's Compound helps build up resistance against such distress. Just see if you, too, don't remarkably benefit. Also a great stomachic tonic. Worth trying!

Free Crafts Course Offered

FREE TRAINING in weaving leatherworking and other aesthetic crafts is being offered to persons volunteering a day or more weekly for rehabilitation work among war veterans and servicemen in Washington area hospitals.

The course, sponsored by the D. C. Red Cross Arts and Skills Corps, will equip volunteers to instruct patients how to make such items as rugs, scarves, billfolds, key containers, belts and wool animals.

Volunteers are needed immediately to help maintain such an instruction program at Walter Reed, Mount Alto and Bolling Field Hospitals, where the work affords many hours of pleasure to bedridden patients.

A new two-week course was opened by the District Red Cross last night, will meet through Friday from 9:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. No previous training is necessary, but persons with artistic aptitudes and interests are especially valuable, the sponsors point out. For further information, applicants are asked to call REpublic 8300, extension 136.

Sorority Plans Installation At Breakfast

Alpha Epsilon Alpha Alumnae Chapter of Alpha Chi Omega sorority will hold its annual May breakfast and installation of officers at the Burlington Hotel on Sunday, May 25, 10:30 a. m.

Several national officers will be present. Mrs. Watson M. Frutchey of Memphis, Tenn., alumnae district chairman, will be principal speaker. Other honor guests will include Mrs. William H. Cravens, Bethesda, Md., national treasurer, and two province presidents, Mrs. C. L. McGuinness of Washington and Mrs. Burton S. Pearsall of Barrington, Ill.

Mrs. Samuel A. Towne will act as toastmaster: Miss Sybil Burdeshaw, retiring president, and Mrs. J. Carney Howell, incoming president, will be on the program.

Miss Rebecca Holmes, alumnae state chairman, is in charge of arrangements for the breakfast, assisted by Miss Ann Trittepo and Miss Molly Blackwood. Reservations are being received by Mrs. Carl F. Izzard, 4832 26th st. N., Arlington, Va., telephone OWen 6096.

The first postwar national convention of the sorority will be held at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, Canada, from June 24 to 29. Mrs. H. Phelps Gates of Boston, Mass., is convention manager, assisted by Mrs. Raymond L. Suppes of Washington, financial manager.

For Extra Space

If you need extra closet space in the dining room of your new little home, a corner cupboard is just the thing. Paint the outside to match the woodwork and if a little color would brighten or add smartness, the inside surfaces might be done in a contrasting shade.

For Lovelier Lips

Breath-taking? But yes, and in more ways than one. This new beauty aid has a double purpose—first, to make your lips look lovely; and second, to freshen your breath.

High news in the beauty department is a dual-purpose lipstick. 'Tis said it sweetens your breath while it reddens your lips.

It's literally a "breath-taking" beauty aid to help preserve daintiness and allure. As a lipstick, it is of excellent quality, creamy and smooth and fashion-colored right.

In appearanec it looks exactly like any other lipstick. But here is the difference. It contains ingredients that aid in masking breath odors. These ingredients are similar to those in mouth washes and were tested five years in laboratories before this lipstick was put on sale. It helps sweeten your breath after eating, smoking or drinking.

Although it helps give you lovelier lips and a sweeter breath, it has no unusual scent of its own and no unusual taste. It comes in several vibrant shades and is encased in a simple, gold-colored case. You'd never guess this unsuspecting little tube of leading a double life!

Mme. Loudon To Speak

Mme. Loudon, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, will be guest speaker when the Petworth Woman's Club holds its annual luncheon Thursday at 1 p. m. at Hotel 2400. Guests of honor will be Mrs. Gertrude Parks, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Charlotte Clark, librarian at the Petworth branch library, who is an honorary member of the club.

As a special project, Mrs. Edward C. Madgeburger, president, has supplied a family in Dordrecht, Holland, with 90 pounds of clothing. Tribute will be paid to the Netherlands at the luncheon.

A musical program will be given by Mrs. Malcolm Scates, soloist, and Alta Hollis Brown, pianist. The invocation will be pronounced by Mrs. John W. Millian. Mrs. Leroy Scott is general chairman of the luncheon. Mrs. Raymond S. Hart is chairman of reservations and Mrs. Arthur G. Dunn, head of hospitality, will serve as hostess.

Those Shiny Windows

The secret of bright, sparkling windows is clear water. Soap merely streaks the glass and is hard to rub off. If windows are not too dirty spray the water on, or wipe it on with a chamois, then dry the panes thoroughly with another chamois or a lintless cloth. Add a little ammonia to the water if very dirty. Use about four tablespoons of dilute ammonia for each gallon of water.

NAUSEA due to high altitudes, speed and sudden changes, relieved with MOTHERSILL'S AIRSICK REMEDY. Helps to restore balance of balance. Quiets the nerves. THE WORLD OVER
